BOSTON SENDS A GOOD TIMES GREETING TO U. S.

"Full Dinner Pail" No Longer a Campaign Slogan, But a Reality—Flood Tide of New Business Turns Wheels of Industry in New England.

EMPORIUMS AND FACTORIES ARE DELUGED WITH ORDERS

Twenty-Five Thousand Idle Men Return to Benches. Vast Cotton, Shoe and Rubber, Jewelry and Machine Plants Working Day and Night—Railroad Shops Rushed to Cope with Increasing Traffic Conditions.

NEW ENGLAND has a Thanksgiving message for the world. Her manufacturers and merchants report a good tide of new business following the stagnation of the past year. Confidence in the permanent return of prosperity has been absolutely restored among business men.

The "full dinner pail" is no longer a campaign slogan; it is a reality, and New England workers and employers alike will have real cause to give thanks next Thursday.

The hum of the Wheels of Prosperity is heard in every city and town about Boston.

The mighty awakening of slumbering industries which is heralded from every part of the United States and even from Canada as the aftermath of restored confidence is nowhere more complete than in the vast industrial plants and mercantile emporiums in and around the New England metropolis.

Reports from the territory within an hour's ride of Boston show that fully 25,000 idle ones have been set to work during the three weeks since election day. More than 100,000 workers are now on full time in Boston and the outlying localities, where before November 3 they were drawing from one-third to three-fourths of their full week's pay.

Vast armies of cotton workers in the textile centres like Fall River, Lowell, Lawrence, New Bedford and Manchester are again moving the millions of spindles at top speed; wages are advancing, strikes are settled and huge new plants are springing into the air.

The immense jewelry industry of the Attleboros and Providence has been infused with new life, with dealers all over the country calling for big holiday stocks.

Scores of shoe and rubber factories, which hitherto suffered from dull business in the Fall even in prosperous times, are running to their greatest capacity and additional plants are under construction in anticipation of a record Spring trade.

The same glad tidings come from the great machinery, brass and silver plants of New Haven, Bridgeport, Ansonia, Waterbury and Meriden.

To cope with the already augmented commerce, and provide for the record freight and passenger traffic seen on the business horizon, every railroad shop in New England is being operated at rush speed.

Industrialism in New England is close to its zenith, and labor troubles are at a minimum, as the natural sequence to the wholesale revival of trades.

INCREASED BUSINESS ALL OVER NEW ENGLAND

ATTLEBORO—General improvement in jewelry business immediately after election.

ADAMS—Ellis shirt factory starts after being closed nine months.

AMESBURY—Atwood Auto Specialty Company gradually increasing its output.

BRIDGEWATER—Carver cotton mill now on full time with full complement of help.

BROCKTON—T. D. Barry & Co., shoes, 3,000 hands, on full time after eight months of short time. Stacy, Adams & Co. now on full time; will build addition to plant.

CHICOPEE FALLS—Stevens-Duryea Auto Company now running nights.

FALL RIVER—American Print Company has had released to it $600,000 worth of orders.

FITCHBURG—Iver Johnson Arms & Cycle Company, Parkhill Gingham Mills, Simonds Saw Works, E. P. Pitts Cotton Twisting Mill have all increased running hours, and the Pitts Company has started night work. Boston & Maine shops increase hours. Shirtreff Worsted Company now on full time; have enough orders to keep them busy until July.

GARDNER—John A. Dunn Company, reed chairs, have begun seventy-four hour schedule and new machinery has just been installed.

LAWRENCE—American Woolen Company rushed with orders; overtime expected.

LEOMINSTER—Damon Comb Company has started night shifts four nights weekly; all workshops busy.

MILLIONAIRE PAINE WEDS HIS ADOPTED DAUGHTER.

Two Months After Wife Dies Raving in Asylum, Takes Girl as His Bride.

ON HONEYMOON TO ORIENT

Head of Well-Known Furniture House in Romance That Rivals Dreams of Fiction.

ONE might make endless search in fiction to find a parallel to the romance which is rounding out the life of George F. D. Paine, millionaire, head of the Paine Furniture Company, who is now aboard ship with his bride of two weeks, bound for Ceylon. Paine's first wife died only last September, demented, in the Waverly retreat, where she had been confined for seven years. The young woman who is now his bride was until November 2 last his daughter by adoption. On that date he had the adoption proceedings annulled.

George F. D. Paine

Mrs. Paine, formerly Miss Johns.

To the members of the First Baptist Church, where Paine is a deacon, and a few others the story of the marriage will be no great surprise, while to others the wedding ceremony was the finale of a series of incidents in his life which make it decidedly romantic and interesting.

Mr. Paine was married to Miss Margaret F. Johns, formerly a teacher in the Berkeley street Y. W. C. A., by the Rev. Francis H. Rowley, his own pastor, in the Hotel Buckminster on November 9th. Only a very few of his most intimate friends were present, but about thirty of the most prominent society members of he Back Bay saw him and his bride off at the Back Bay Station.

Met Girl on Shipboard.

Since September last Mr. Paine and Miss Johns lived at the Buckminster as father and daughter. Fifteen years ago on one of his trips from Europe where he had taken Mrs. Paine in an effort to stay her growing madness they met Miss Johns on shipboard. She was returning to Boston after a visit to her home in Weymouth, England. She was born there in 1883.

Mrs. Paine, it is said, was of a peculiarly jealous disposition. She took a great liking, however, to Miss Johns, who is described also a sweet disposition, soft-speaking young English woman whose way were particularly soothing to the afflicted woman. So she was frequently able always and Mr. Paine asked her to give up work and make her home with them. She consented.

It must it become necessary to put Mrs. Paine in the insane asylum. Not long afterward Mr. Paine legally adopted Miss Johns as his daughter. The records of the probate court show what his petition was granted on August 16th by Judge John W. McClin. In that petition Mr. Paine stated that his wife, Mary E. Paine, was not competent to sign it as she was then "in a state of advanced dementia."

Miss Johns thereupon became Miss Margaret E. Paine and since then has been so known. She has been active in church work with her father—now her husband.

Gets Adoption Annulled

In moving for the annulment of the adoption, Mr. Paine said in his petition that he asked it to be granted because at the time when he believed he was legally adopting Miss Johns, his wife was unable because of her dementia to join in the proceedings inaugurated by William G. Rice, the new general superintendent of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, that system is today confronted with labor troubles that are likely to culminate in one of the greatest strikes in its history.

Last night the representatives of the men drew up an ultimatum which is to be delivered Monday.

If a strike is ordered the whole of the traffic, freight and passenger, on the entire system is likely to be tied up and more than four thousand men will be thrown out of employment.

The immediate cause of the trouble is the recent laying off of twenty-eight passenger train crews without the withdrawal of any of the trains.

NEW HAVEN FACES TIE-UP OF SYSTEM

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 21.—Owing to policies inaugurated by William G. Rice, the new general superintendent of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, that system is today confronted with labor troubles that are likely to culminate in one of the greatest strikes in its history.

Last night the representatives of the men drew up an ultimatum which is to be delivered Monday.

If a strike is ordered the whole of the traffic, freight and passenger, on the entire system is likely to be tied up and more than four thousand men will be thrown out of employment.

The immediate cause of the trouble is the recent laying off of twenty-eight passenger train crews without the withdrawal of any of the trains.

GIRL'S LOVE FOR HORSE WINS RICH HUSBAND

Her love of the noblest of animals, the horse, explains the romance of Miss Louise Cromell, whose engagement to Orrin A. Martin, the wealthy horse owner and exhibitor of Manchester-by-the-Sea, was announced in Lynn yesterday. They will be married today by the Rev. Monsignor Arthur J. Teeling in St. Mary's Church.

FIRST AUTO DEATH CRASH AT SAVANNAH

Savannah, Ga., Nov. 21.—The first fatal accident in connection with the Grand Prize Automobile race, to be held on Thanksgiving day, occurred today, when the S. P. U. car, driven by John Juliano, one of the contestants in the small car race, was upset on the White Bluff road, and his mechanic, Mathis de Rossi, was killed.

HAS LETTERS TO PROVE HAMMERSTEIN'S LOVE

New York, Nov. 21.—In further substantiation of her claims in her suit for $100,000 for breach of contract against Oscar Hammerstein, Miss Frances Lee yesterday gave out excerpts from some of the letters which she claims Mr. Hammerstein wrote her during the ten years and more of the acquaintanceship as impressive and ardent.

RACERS ARE PILED IN HEAPS AS 6-DAY CONTEST ENDS.

Winners of the Six Day Contest

	Miles.	Laps.
1st. Lawson—Anderson	1,320	1
2nd. Mitten—Logan	1,320	1
3rd. Vanoni—Williams	1,320	1
4th. Root—Collins	1,320	1
5th. McKay—Drobeck	1,320	1
6th. Krebs—Rupprecht	1,320	1
7th. Demara and Hollister
Folger and Clark.
Hill and Bardgett
Last. Devonovitch and Halligan.

The last mile of the six-day bicycle race last night was a series of hair-thrilling spills and when the pistol was fired which announced the end of the race, but five o fthe ten who started in the final sprint were riding and one of these was given fifth place by courtesy. Three of the riders piled in a heap on the last mile, three of them being severely hurt.

The finish, as officially placed by the judges, was:

Lawson, first; Mitten, second; Vanoni, third; Root, fourth; McKay, fifth, with Hollister protesting that he ought to get that place; and Krebs, given sita, although he did not finish and received a broken collar bone in the tenth and final lap.

The fourth lap saw the first spill and it put McFarland, Hollister and McKay out of the running.

Terrific Pace at Close.

Root led in the fifth, Lawson and Mitten at his rear wheel. They kept this order until the finish.

The pistol shot warning them that this was the last circle they all set out at a terrific pace. Just as they made the last turn and while Lawson was riding high on the bank Krebs broke his collar bone, Bardgett was cut and bruised and may have a fractured skull and Clark was severely shaken up.

As they piled up Lawson shot down the bank into first place with Mitten half a length behind him and Vanoni and Root so close that none knew which was third until the official placing was called.

The judges gave McKay fifth place because after the spill in the fourth he remounted and pluckily chased after the others who had gained a lap. Krebs finished on leading his wheel over the finish despite his broken collar bone and got sixth place for his pluck.

The record for sixty hours' continuous riding was broken. The old record was 1,747 miles, one lap; the new is 1,320 miles, 1 lap.

The 45 per cent of the gate receipts will give the winner about $1,000, the second $800, the third $600.

CLAUDIA HAINS TELLS AMAZING STORY OF LIFE

Writes Fully for The American of the Events Since She Met Captain Hains as a Schoolgirl to the Time of the Annis Tragedy at Bayside.

ARMY LIFE IN POSTS WHERE SHE LIVED AS SHE SAW IT

"I Was Initiated by Captain Hains Into the Society of a Very Fast Set, Distinctly Apart From the Nicer Class at the Fort, Until I Often Vowed Never to Return," She Declares.

WITHHOLDING nothing, baring the secrets of her married life, telling of the lives the wives of army officers lead, Mrs. Claudia L. Hains, of Winthrop, has written for the Boston Sunday American the story of her love for Captain Peter C. Hains, who, in December, is to be placed on trial for murder in New York.

Mrs. Hains tells the story of her life from the time she first met Captain Hains down to the killing of Annis at the Bayside Yacht Club dock.

As Mrs. Hains probably will be a figure of as much interest in the Hains trial as Evelyn Thaw was in the Thaw trial, and as in the article which she has written exclusively for the Boston Sunday American she has for the first time related in detail her army experiences, her story is one of absorbing interest.

By CLAUDIA HAINS.

I GREW up from a very young child in the little town of Winthrop, where so much happiness and misery was in store for me when I reached womanhood. I was a child with my hair hanging in two braids to my waist and in short skirts when I first saw the handsome and dashing young officer from Fort Banks, Lieutenant Hains.

Passing the fort every day on my way to and from school, I often admired a large green sofa pillow seen in the window of his quarters, and to myself expressed a wish to become its owner, which was granted a few years later.

I was introduced to this soldier with the broad stripes on his trousers, broader than the regulations allowed, and like most young girl was dazzled by so much military splendor. I forgot to mention the occasion on which I first met Mr. Hains. It was at one of a series of dances given in the town. My mother was one of the matrons of these dances, costume affairs as I remember them, and I appeared to my great delight in my mother's wedding gown and for the first time with my hair high on my head, making me feel quite a woman grown.

I was quite elated over my introduction to Mr. Hains, but was unable to carry on conversation with him, partly on account of the twelve years' difference in ages and his being a stranger to the Winthropites. But he was a beautiful dancer, and what mattered the conversation to me, a young girl of sixteen, just entering high school. I was more taken up with the joy of living than with the serious side of life.

He asked to call at my home, but my mother objected. Determined to call, just the same, he finally overcame objections and offered to give me fencing lessons. I accepted the offer and he came faithfully on Wednesdays and Saturdays to my home. These lessons were, however, rather unsuccessful, especially after he put the idea of marriage into my young head.

Seemed Fun to Get Married

That seemed to be the best fun ever, to get married to that beautiful uniform and live in a pretty little home of my own, so I made up my mind to get married, and after many objections won my parents' consent. School and fencing immediately vanished from my horizon, and I was joined in wedlock to my soldier in my dear old-fashioned Winthrop homestead on the night of April 30, 1900, by Mr. Carden, the Episcopal rector of the town.

T. Jenkins Hains and his wife came to visit Mr. Hains at Fort Banks several weeks before our marriage and helped to hasten things all they could. He and his wife, together with my father's people, were present at the ceremony.

All my girl and boy friends turned out that night and swarmed about the house to give me a send-off. I raised the window shade in the room in which we were gathered and looked out into the sea of faces, receiving a hearty cheer and a cigar. A line of soldiers was stationed from the house to the fort, and when the knot was tied the guns at Fort Banks boomed out a salute in honor of the event.

We were saved from a rustlade of old shoes and rice and other customary attentions by a hard shower. After the shower we drove away in a carriage to Boston, Captain Hatch was ordered in command at Fort Hanks during our wedding trip. Mr. Hains took me to his home in Baltimore to meet his father and mother.

The General and his wife met us at the station, and we walked to their home on Charles street. Mrs. Hains had a dainty supper waiting us, and the table was beautifully decorated with American Beauties. Thornton and his wife arrived the day after on a visit to his mother. Mrs. Haine seemed to be very unhappy because her favorite son had married, for, as she told me, she had always intended to keep him for herself. However, she seemed to become reconciled after a while.

I remember I thought the General the dearest old man, he appeared to be so delighted at the thought of having a young girl in the house, as he Urges Friends to Unite.

Following are a few of the hundreds of letters, from friends of candidates, received by the European Tour Editor during the week:

European Tour Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN:

As a friend I am starting Miss Ida M. Ebsary in the contest with 200 votes. I think she is one of the most popular Sunday school teachers, as well as one of the youngest in her district. She has taught in St. Rose Church, Chelsea, for the past two years. Besides being a Sunday school teacher, she is a popular girl. I belong in the vicinity of O'Keefe square. If all her friends will help I am sure she will be one of the thirty-six Sunday school teachers to go on the European trip.—A FRIEND.

European Tour Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN:

Kindly credit Miss Edith M. Fuller of Other Street, Watertown, with twenty votes. She is a late starter, but a hard fighter. She teaches in Phillips Congregational Church, Watertown.

F. A. HEALD.

Watertown.

European Tour Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN:

Enclosed find a sash package of votes for Mrs. William N. Kenney, of District No. 4. Mrs. Kenney is the charming wife of a popular floorwalker with the Houghton & Dutton Company, and she has a host of friends working for her. She will surely win.

(Signed) M. M.

European Tour Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN:

I am sending 200 votes for Miss Anna Morley, St. Rose Church, Chelsea, for the most popular teacher. Her friends will help her to gain the lead, where we all expect to see her finish. Wake up, Chelsea, and help the most popular Sunday School teacher to win.

A FRIEND

Drops Into Verse.

European Tour Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN:

I enclose in this envelope fifty votes for Maurice Fitzgerald, Sacred Heart Church, Malden. I hope he will win.

MARY E. MCCLANCY.

187 Washington street, Malden.

European Tour Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN:

Will you please print the following? One Dorchester girl will go in on the fly. Send a little further and I will tell you what.

If you'd save your toes with a will,
Well beat everyone else to a standstill.
Our votes will go and all,
Send in all packages large and small
Tell your pals to everyone you know,
And then no one else will have a show.
If you are to give anyone a foreign vacation,
Send in your votes for Margaret Leighton.

G. W. MCIER.

SIX DROWN IN SHIP CRASH IN OUTER HARBOR.

Three-Masted Schooner Hugh G., Rammed by Scow, Sent to Bottom.

CAPTAIN GOES TO DEATH

A shipwreck, one of the worst in the vicinity of Boston in several years, happened in Broad Sound at the entrance to Boston harbor about 12:45 a. m. yesterday. The Hugh G., a three-masted schooner loaded with 850 tons of rock pinestel, bound to Boston from Harvey, N. B., was rammed near Graves Light, off Winthrop and Nantasket, by a mud scow and sent to the bottom with her captain and four of his crew before they could get a boat free of the sinking ship. One of the crew of the scow was drowned.

In less than two minutes and with sails set, the schooner sank beneath the surface. Three of the crew were saved. The scow, which sank the steamer was one of 170 in tow of the tug Light, J. Wilcox on the way to the dumping ground. The tug stood and conducted the rescue.

The men who were drowned were:

From the Schooner.

Captain Obed Knowlton, Advocate, N. S.

First Mate William Merriam, Parrsboro, N. S.

Steward William Mulberry, Advocate, N. S.

Seaman Delbert Mills, Parrsboro, N. S.

Seaman Earl Mosher, Parrsboro, N. S.

From the Scow.

Seaman Martin Johnson, East Boston.

Near Death When Saved.

Anderson with Second Mate Orrin Mulberry and Seaman Sigurd Nordlie were rescued from drowning just as their strength was exhausted.

Five of the full crew of eight, including the captain, his mate, steward, who was a brother of the second mate and two seamen were drowned.

I thought I was a goner. I had given up all hope. I was so weak and exhausted even when I was rescued that I did not have strength enough to pull myself out of the water, and a man had to go down the ladder and lift me out bodily."

That's the story of the terrifying experience of Seaman Sigurd Anderson, a young Norwegian.

This was Anderson's third narrow escape from drowning and also Nordlie's third. Second Mate Orrin Mulberry and one his older brother, the steward, in very much cast down. It was his first experience in such an accident. He's so terrified that he says he will never go to sea again.

The three survivors of the Hugh G. sat on their beds, bunched in a little group in Room 37 on the first floor of Mariners' House, North square last night. They were almost too terrified to talk. Mulberry is still weak from the sufferings he underwent and from the water on his chest lungs.

Grandmother, Heart-Broken, Asks for Aid in Search for Missing Florence Freeman

Child for Whom American Found a Home Now Vainly Hunted by Grandparent.

Florence Marshall Freeman, who is sought by grandmother.

Mrs. Isabel Marshall of Foxboro, a heart-broken grandmother, has been hunting for months for her beautiful little seven year old granddchild, Florence Marshall Freeman, for whom the Boston American three years ago found a home, but who for over two years has been missing.

Miss E. Sophia Freeman, formerly of the Norton Seminary, adopted the child. She moved away from that town some time ago, and the aged grandmother, who had been forced through straitened circumstances, three years ago to give for child to some person who could give her a good home, has been anxiously searching ever since to know where Florence was taken.

"My heart is breaking," sobbed Mrs. Marshall yesterday as she asked that the Boston Sunday American would come to her aid and find the child for her. "I want to know how she is and where she is.

"When they took Florence away from me they promised that I was to see the little one whenever I wanted to, but they have moved away from Norton and I cannot find where they have gone and taken the child.

"When I couldn't give Florence the home I knew she should have the Boston American told my story and found a good home for the little girl. Now I must appeal to it to find where she has been taken. I only want to see her, that is all, but if I cannot, I fear my heart will break."

When in May, 1905, Mrs. Marshall realizing that she could not afford to bring her grandchild up as he desired, decided to give her to anyone who could give Florence a good home, the Boston American told her story. Then followed almost one hundred applications for the little girl.

HELEN KELLER SEES AND HEARS WORLD OF MENTAL VISION

'My Universe, Without Color and Sound, Breathes and Throbs With Life,' She Writes.

VIVID WORD PICTURES

In Her Book, Just Completed, Wonderful Blind and Deaf Girl Tells Her Inner Life.

"You are so accustomed to light that I fear you will stumble when I try to guide you through the land of darkness and silence," writes Helen Keller, as she introduces her readers to her last book, "The World I Live In."

"But perhaps you may understand her view point in life and "seeing" existence, as she as experienced it, deprived as she is of sight and hearing, the natives says: "My hand is to me what your hearing and sight are to you."

Without parallel in literature, unique in conception, with no prototype to guide our sightless eyes, with no beckoning guides to direct her through ways which have never heard, this deaf and blind girl has painted with startling accuracy and to mind-defying the actual, living, breathing life which she is leading.

"My world is built of touch sensations, void of physical color and sound," she relates, but without color and sound it teathes and throbs with life.

Character in Handshake.

"With my three trustworthy guides, touch, smell and taste, I make many excursions into the borderland of experience which is to me still on the edge of night.

"With my hand I seize and hold all that I find in the three worlds—physical, intellectual and spiritual.

"It is not best for me to say whether or not I see what is in front of the eyes. I know that the world I touch with my fingers is alive, ruddy and satisfying.

"Those who touch the hand many sweet certainties which our more fortunate fellows with eyes sometimes miss. Touch is unutilitated.

"When the organ of my body is a microscope.

"I am told that the glances of a beloved eye thrills one from a distance, but there is no difference in that hand in mine," she said. Some hands while they carry passive messages with pleasure, and others of some precise makes and think of nothing but of delivering it.

"I have grasped the hands of some rich people, so soft in texture and so cold as not are not beautiful. Beneath their soft, smooth surfaces what a cold, selfish, unsympathetic character!

"I have felt many beauties of the face in the beauties of the hand are many. People reveal their contentedness in the hand is under no such restraint. Little children are the wild flowers of humanity and their finger motions wild flowers of speech.

"This is my private science of palmistry."

How She Seems to See.

While this wonderful woman knows that she cannot see with the physical eyes of mankind, so acutely trained are the three senses she possesses that she insists that she does not miss actual sight. She says:

"Sometimes it seems as if the very substance of my flesh were so many eyes telling me as well signs a world newly created every day.

"The scent brings me into contact with the traffic and manifold activity of the city."

Speculating upon which of her senses is the most helpful, she says: "The senses assist and reinforce each other so much on actual that I am not sure which or touch or smell tells me the most about the world.

"For some inexplicable reason, the sense of smell does not lend the high position it deserves among its sisters. There is nothing of the dog in me, I am afraid.

Helen Keller uses her sense of smell comparison in place of eyes. She proves it, for

"I know by smell the kind of a house we enter.

"Sometimes when there is no wind, the odors are so grouped that I know the character of the country and can place a hayfield, a country store, a garden, a barn, a piece of clover, a furnished room with the windows open.

"By exhalations I know much about people. I know the work they are engaged in. Human odors are so varied and capable of recognition as hands and faces. The fear odors of those I love are so definite, so unmistakable, that nothing can quite obliterate them."

Touch the Eyes' Superior.

Her classification of the senses sounds indeed strange to those who are possessed of normal faculties. She says:

"In my classification of the senses, smell is a little the ear's inferior and touch is a great deal the eye's superior. Touch has its eatables.

"I have without the sense of smell and taste for several days. A loneliness and sense of unreality fell on the air, where myriad odors I missed. My temporary loss of smell proved to me that the absence of a sense need not dull the mental faculties, and I felt distinctly one's view of the world."

How she pities many of us who can see and hear.

"I have walked with people whose eyes are full of light, but who see nothing in cloud, sea, or sky, nothing in city or street, nothing in books. What a sightless masquerade is this seeing! They have the sunlight, the morning skies, the purple of sunset floods, yet their souls voyage through this enchanted world with a barren starer. They only lighten dark in the night of ignorance and insensibility.

"It is more difficult to teach ignorance than to teach an intelligent blind man to see the grandeur of Niagara."

How is the lesson drawn from the cultivation of the senses and the mind and the intellect.

Wonders of Universe.

"The infinite wonders of the universe are revealed to us in exact measure as we are capable of receiving them. Nature sings her most exalted songs to those who love her.

"Touch cannot bridge distance—it is fit only for the contact of surfaces—but thought leaps the chasm. For this reason I am capable to use words descriptive of my senses."

She is insistent in this story of the "World I Live In" in using adjectives denoting color and shades of color and she tells why she can do this as well as the blind.

"I understand how scarlet may differ from crimson because I know the scent of the orange is not the scent of the rose. I can also guess where this color may have shades, and guess what shades are."

Helen Keller's words must have colored her condition before she learned anything about the description of herself at that time is eloquent.

"Before my teacher came, I did not know that I existed. I lived in a world that was dark, but I did not know that I knew anger, or that I lived. I was acted or desired. I had neither will nor intellect. My inner life then, was a blank without soul, present or future, without hope or ambition, without wonder or love or fulfilment."

Boston to Gotham by Airship Will Be Reality, Says Post

Funny Side and Perilous Features of Navigating Heavens Discussed at Aero Club Banquet.

A. Holland Forbes, Augustus Post, M. H. Arnold, Charles J. Glidden, Prof. A. Lawrence Rotch of Blue Hill Observatory, Vice-President T. E. Byrnes of the Yale-Harvard railroad, Prof. W. H. Pickering of Harvard Observatory, Mayor Hibbard and other distinguished men gathered at the Boston City Club last night for the first annual meeting and banquet of the Aero Club of New England, which also commemorated the 125th anniversary of the first balloon ascension on record.

At a hotel business meeting of the club officers were elected, Prof. Pickering of Harvard being elected to succeed Prof. Rotch of Blue Hill Observatory as president, when the new board of directors means to elect officers.

It was voted to buy a new balloon for the Aero Club, of 77,000 cubic feet capacity.

At the banquet succeeding the meeting toy balloons were fastened to the chairs and ices were brought in balloon baskets. Nearly all members of the Aero Club and guests were at the banquet and the splendid present and more splendid future of aeronautics was extolled.

Mayor's "Hot Air" Balloons.

Mayor Hibbart allowed that his experiences with balloons so far had been wholly with "hot air" ones.

Charles J. Glidden recounted the history of the Aero Club of New England.

Professor Rotch of Blue Hill Observatory sketched the history of balloonist since its beginning 125 years ago.

A. Holland Forbes, who with Augustus Post, had made a thrilling descent in the American balloon "Conqueror" in the International race at Berlin this Fall, related their experience in that perilous flight. The start was simply told but was of absorbing interest. Not even Mr. Forbes' semi-humorous way of discounting the dangers they met could hide the real story of peril which lay behind his modest recitation.

W. E. Morrison of Minneapolis described his recent successful flight from Pittsfield to Rockville, Conn. with Pilot Van Sicel.

Augustus Post, Secretary of the Aero Club of America, spoke on "Heavier than Air Balloons," describing the Wright aeroplanes and giving a most graphic account of their flight at Fort Meyer.

"Before long," he said, "I am sure that you will see aeroplanes flying from New York to Philadelphia, or to Boston, and making quicker trips from city to city."

T. W. Barron spoke in half-humorous vein, and Vice President Byrnes of the New York, New Haven and Hartford, said that, when Mr. Glidden had perfected his aerial transportation line to New York probably the New Haven road "would effect a merger" with it.

William Hill described his recent ascent from Pittsfield, and A. V. Wilson of Bar Harbor, a veteran aeronaut and yacht pioneer, with a record of 2,980 ascents, related some of his early experiences.

MAYOR ASSAILED BY MRS. POST, LODGING HOUSE LEADER.

Denounces Commission's Crusade in the South End as a "Farce"

'REFORMERS' ONLY IN NAME

Unwarranted Interference, She Declares, Would Rob Good People of Homes.

"There is not a man of brains in Boston who will defend Mayor Hibbard in the lodging house crusade," was pointed out the lodging house keepers of this city, said Mrs. Augustus Post, president of the Lodging Landlords' Protective and Real Estate Protective Association.

A flame at the center of the landlady's is sufficient to illuminate the careful observer that this is a woman of conscientious, intelligent and classy. Short and stout, she has passed the first large month of the woman of strong character. Her eyes are dark gray, clear seeing and thoughtful and her silver gray hair is neatly and simply arranged.

Seated in the living room of her home in Worcester square, surrounded by rooms furnished in black silk cord, perched on her feet, she had more the appearance of the dean of a college than that of a landlady, and the term "Lodging-house keeper" seemed inappropriate.

But the term "lodgings," which seems to be frowned on in many in this country, is accepted in the best circles in Europe.

"Lodgings" at Oxford.

"What, the apartments at Cambridge and Oxford, where the professors are housed, whether luxurious or otherwise, are called lodgings," she said. "I do not object to being called a 'lodging-house keeper' although, besides carrying on the business in the house which I have owned for twenty-one years, I have taught thermap, my native tongue, in the German Holy Trinity School and the Sacred Heart Academy of Boston, and I am the possessor of a certificate from the Boston school board. My husband is a teacher in the New England Conservatory of Music and was formerly a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

"I have lived in Boston forty years, and more than half of these years have been spent in the South End. I have every reason to call myself a 'South Ender' and a member of the Ladies' and Real Estate Protective Association personally, and it is quite unlikely that I should affiliate with any whom I did not know to be upright and worthy citizens.

"Is it strange," continued Mrs. Post, "that I should stand among the landlords of the South End is one of intense resentment against Mayor Hibbard and his lodging-house committee (which, having no power, wrongfully styles itself a commission), which by comparative suggestion and instruction tries to reformed to place our homes, shared with those who come to the city to work or pursue their studies, on a plane with the brothel?"

So-called Reformers.

"Eight years ago a number of so-called reformers, Mayor Hibbard among them, in contrary to the accepted idea of reformers, there people acquired dominion in the finest parts of the South End, the dwelling place of the South End, the dwelling place of the wealthy, the fashionable and the cultured, all summers, endeavoring to make positive and instructive visits, were referred to place our homes, shared with those who come to the city to work or pursue their studies, on a plane with the brothel?"

"Is it strange," continued Mrs. Post, "that landlords among the landlords of the South End is one of intense resentment against Mayor Hibbard and his lodging-house committee (which, having no power, wrongfully styles itself a commission), which by comparative suggestion and instruction tries to reformed

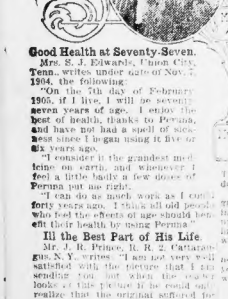
WHAT GRANDMA AND GRANDPA SAY IS TRUE.

They Say That Pe-ru-na Is Good for Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis and Catarrh.



Good Health at Seventy-Seven.

Mrs. S. J. Edwards, Union City, Tenn., writes under date of Nov. 7, 1904, the following:

"On the 7th day of February, 1905, if I live, I will be seventy-seven years of age. I enjoy the best of health, thanks to Peruna, and have not had a spell of sickness since I began using it five or six years ago.

"I consider it the grandest medicine on earth, and whenever I feel a little badly a few doses of Peruna put me right.

"I can do as much work as I could forty years ago. I tell all old people who feel the effects of age should benefit their health by using Peruna."

Ill the Best Part of His Life.

Mr. R. Prince, R. R. 2, Cartagus, N. Y., writes: "I am not very well satisfied with the picture that I am sending you, but when the original looks as this picture it is could only realize that the original suffered for forty years, the best of his life, until your kind advice and prescription cured him, he would know from whence those wrinkles came. Now (Feb.) for four years and had tried several doctors, but they could do me no good. I had pain and rattling in the chest, cough, expectoration, especially at night.

"I took Peruna, and can now say I am entirely well. I feel ten years younger since using Peruna. I am seventy-three years old. I never expect to be entirely well or young again, but I am thankful for what Peruna has done for me."

Feels Ten Years Younger.

Mr. Henry Mertz, 1505 West Franklin St., Evansville, Ind., writes: "Which can cured him, he would know from I had bronchial trouble for four years and had tried several doctors, but they could do me no good. I had pain and rattling in the chest, cough, expectoration, especially at night.

AVALANCHE OF NEW ORDERS SETS IDLE WHEELS TURNING

Iowa manufacturers are jubilant as new orders and orders which had been cancelled on Republican success at the polls pour into their mail, giving the signal to drive into action long-idle machinery.

They are inspired as they read the reports from Dun's and Bradstreet's that there were only 226 failures throughout the nation the past week, as against 264 in the one previous.

Here are just a few of the Paeans of Prosperity which are heard in this city and the populous territory which contributes to its commercial activity:

The Boston Rubber Shoe Company, with plants at Malden and Revere, is operating every department on full time, with nearly 2,500 hands.

The Boston Belting Company of Malden reports a big increase in orders and has added hands working. The Wadsworth-Howland company, paints and artists' supplies, is running on full time.

A full force is employed to fill large new orders for underwear at the factory of James Donovan & Co. in Everett.

Shoe Business Booming.

At the Plant shoe factory in Jonatan Plain Treasurer D. E. Radcliffe said yesterday:

"We employ 3,500 people. Since election the factory has received orders for them in advance of a year ago. This now means six months' work. We have added to the working Saturday afternoons, beginning to-day. This is necessitated by the rush.

"We are now employing 1,000 men more than we were before election. Edward D. Whitford, manager of the immense factory of the Whitford Glue Company at Somerville, said: "Our business had become so low that we were working only 30 hours a week, and now we are working forty-five hours a week, and soon will be working 50 hours.

"The John Squire packing plant has put on 100 new men and a night shift.

George F. Hechler of the Mason Regulator Company, Roxbury, said:

"We have added to our business since election and are working on full time. We are employing more men now than our usual ratio."

The superintendent of the Gilbert Safety Elastic Company of South Boston said: "Business has improved greatly and we are hiring new help every day."

Waltham Plants Rushed.

Five of Waltham's big manufacturing industries are on full time. The Waltham Watch Company, employing 3,500 hands, is within three hours a week of its full schedule. Two-thirds of the population of 27,000 are dependent on factories. The Waltham Watch Company, which supports half the city's people, now has an output of 2,800 watches daily. Its full capacity is 3,500. The Boston Manufacturing Company, cotton goods, is employing 800 hands on full time.

When people have cash to buy pianos, it is a sign that all business is booming, and the Mason & Hamlin Company announces that at its Wakefield factory improvements were being made that are equivalent to adding a full week's pay, there being a greater demand for musical instruments.

The Haywood Brothers and Wakefield Rattan Company's factory is operating fifty-five hours, as compared with fifty before election, and has put on a night force rapidly.

Nine hundred mechanics are working fifty-four instead of 48 hours at the great Merrimack Print Works, Lowell, and 200 operatives are employed nights.

Orders Come Rapidly.

"We have 20 per cent more help than before election," said Treasurer George F. Eldred of the Standard Loom Works in Uxbridge. "Orders are coming in so fast now fifty hours a week, orders are coming in so fast and there is more business than at any time for the past year."

The rapid business is also picking up; dour workers being employed since election by the factory of the Lowell Manufacturing Company in Dedham. This plant was nearly two months behind.

An avalanche of orders which has given the city of Lynn an atmosphere of unusual prosperity in this line, many of the largest concerns having increased their force of workers since afternoon. The factory of Shoe Machinery Company plant has given work to a large additional employes since the election.

Other factories in the general Electric city which are taking on new men are: The Lynn Boston Company, which has a rush of orders and several larger contracts have been closed recently.

Factories Full Time.

At Woburn the American Hide and Leather Company, employing 300 men, announces business good.

Every line of business in Beverly is booming ten hours a day and six days a week, until recently they were on one-third time. Several hundred operatives have been put back to work. Superintendents say the drummers from the West and South are flooding them with orders. These shoe factories are on full time: J. H. Baker & Co., Gray & Stanley, J. W. Carter & Co., Criterion Shoe Company, Garden City Shoe Company, Rice Allen Shoe Company, Auburn Shoe Company and the Millet-Woodbury Shoe Company.

The United Shoe Machinery plant is on full time for 2,500 hands.

The Lodge Cordage Company, Saxony Worsted Mills and Aetna Woolen Mills—Lodge Cordage Company, Inc.—Extra help is employed in the Silver Lake Cordage Company's plant.

Building Boom in Quincy.

The Stetson Shoe Company of Weymouth reports a decided increase in orders and full weekly schedule.

The Johnson Lumber Company in Quincy is three weeks behind its orders, which is due in part to the rush of work. Farmers are being employed daily and the force is working nights as well as days.

Quincy is in the midst of a building boom.

All of the leather manufacturers at Salem report increased business.

The 3,000 operatives employed in the cotton mills of Fall River are now walking full time, after a period of idleness. Since the manufacturers made their announcement this week that there would be no cut in wages this Fall. Before that they were considering the advisability of the prospect of a cut of 5 per cent, which, under the sliding scale agreement, would have gone into effect on Dec. 1.

During the Summer mills have been running from four days a week to four and in many instances only alternate days.

The decision of the manufacturers not to insist on the reduction in wages at this time will cost them in round numbers $100,000.

Mrs. Paine is a beautiful woman of thirty-nine who looks at least ten years younger. She is a blonde, has light hair, blue eyes and was noted for her exquisite taste in gowns. Unlimited resources were indicated at the lavish display among the fine automobiles and carriages that drive to the exclusive Buckminster were at her command.

To all her kindness for "the old gentleman," as the servants referred to Mr. Paine, was married. He was easily old enough for the relation he had assumed, that of father, and her affection was truly filial. They had not opened the Paine mansion at No. 11 Bay State road since Spring, but had lived in the hotel after coming from the country in the early fall.

While conducted with extreme privacy, the wedding was followed by the most sumptuous dinner served in the Buckminster since the opening. Only the Rev. Dr. Francis Rowley, Mrs. Rowley and Mr. and Mrs. Melvin O. Adams were present at the dinner, but many others were at the ceremony. Many other were at the ceremony. Many others assigned on their return to the city. But few even of this circle knew of the wedding until after Miss Paine was still the young woman's father.

EBEN D. JORDAN TO START OPERA HOUSE

Monday, Nov. 30 is the date set for the opening of the corner stone of the Boston Opera House at Huntington avenue and Opera place. Governor Guild and Mayor Hibbard, representing State and city, will lay the speechmaking. Eben D. Jordan, president of the Boston Opera Company, will lay the corner stone, with which a time box will be deposited.

This box will contain photographic records of the voices of both American and foreign singers, such as Misses Nordica, Eames, Farrar, Nielson and Homer, and Messrs. Hepham and Caruso; also copies of music written by the composers Converse, Horatio Parker, Converse, Chadwick, Paine, Loeffler, Damrosh, Foote, Hadley and Chester.

Programs of the Boston Symphony orchestra, the Handel and Haydn society, the Cecilia, the Choral Art Club, the Apollo club, the Kneisel quartet, the Flonzaley Trio and the orchestra of the New England Conservatory will be built in order to represent musical activities of the city.

The list of stockholders which will be put in the box will be held open for additions through Thursday, Nov. 26, and all subscribers then enrolled will be recorded on the corner stone.

MALDEN CHAPTER, S. A. R., MEET TUESDAY

The Malden Chapter, Sons of the American Revolution, will hold their next meeting on Tuesday evening, Nov. 24, at the residence of George F. Bradstreet in Malden. The following will be the officers: Frank E. Woodward, Dec. William Sedwell and George Howard Earl.

MILLIONAIRE PAINE WEDS 'DAUSHTER'

ceedings, and he had been informed that this left the adoption a matter of legal uncertainty. That no rights had accrued to Miss Johns Paine under the adoption and change of name; that she still remained single, that since the date of the adoption his wife had died and that there remained no way to correct the mistake of to remove the doubt of the validity of the adoption, and for that reason he asked the courts to annul it. The petition was granted.

Mr. Paine's friends say that settlement of his estate in marrying after his wife's death is very unkind and unjust that she has been mentally dead to him for many years and that her physical demise two months ago set the seal upon the building of their tragic relations.

They all say that nothing that money could buy was kept from the tastiest and best beloved daughter, and that she could never ever solicitous for her comfort. Some regard the quick manner in which the wedding ceremony as a matter of form, but he declined this advice. To them he said:

"I have done everything for my wife that it was possible to accomplish. I respect her memory. This girl has been to me the daughter I never had. My wife loved her. Now that she is dead our position would be open to criticism if I refused to marry Miss Johns and she is willing to become my wife. I see no reason for delay. I have had the adoption annulled by mutual request and neither law nor custom of man is being violated in this procedure."

HAZING LEADS TO LYNN BOY'S DEATH

Eight-Year-Old Lingers Five Months After Rough Treatment by Schoolmates.

There is real pathos in the death in Lynn of Willie Hallop, an eight year old boy who attended the Cook Street Primary School. The boy died Friday night of convulsions growing out of a fright and injuries received at the hands of schoolmates, who were doing a little schoolboy hazing.

The leader of the group is himself only seven years of age, and since the Hallop boy died has been inconsolable in his grief. The police started an investigation yesterday, and, at the solicitation of the parents of the dead boy, finally decided to act.

The hazing was done last June. Hallop was forced to be come out of school, his head shaved and he was dragged down the road several. He said some f the boys tied the rope to the telephone pole. He suffered great pain all Summer, despite the skill of the physicians. Their say death was caused by the breaking of an intestine.

ARRAIGN VOTERS FOR CAUCUS FRAUD

The twenty-three Brookline men who are charged with attempting to vote illegally at the Republican caucus in that town on September 22 last when they had voted at a Democratic caucus in April, were all arraigned yesterday in the Brookline municipal court before Associate Justice Henry S. Wade in the presence of a crowd which packed the room.

The case of Frances L. O'Brien, the first on the list, he being charged with illegal voting and with the taking of a false oath, occupied the greater part of the day. When the justice had finished hearing the case he announced that he would give his decision next Saturday morning at 8:30 o'clock.

Cases against John Kelley, Augustin J. Murray and Thomas J. Walsh, which were to have been heard yesterday were also postponed until next Tuesday afternoon.

The defendants, both in $200 bail each, are Jeremiah F. Collins, John A. Head, Stephen Cunningham, Jo seph Donovan, Michael Mulligan, Patrick Sullivan, John Sully, James Herbert, James H. Duffy, John J. Murray, Charles Gillespie, C. A. Lunny, Patrick Larkin, T. C. Ryan, Michael Daly, Francis P. Cusick, George McIntosh, Jr., and Frederick Gordon.

O'Brien was defended by Attorney Daniel F. Daly, while the district attorney's office was represented by Frederick Katz man. When court convened, Michael J. Gibbons who had enrolled the police until that time came into court and was held in $200 for arraignment next Tuesday.

LAYMEN TO CLOSE CONFERENCE TO-DAY

"The laymen's conference has been successful beyon dour hopes," declared Samuel B. Capen, chairman of the Laymen's Missionary conference last night. "It has been a great impression on the whole city. The conference will close to-night.

"Men not a part of the movement have become interested. The work of the conference is a matter of animated discussion on the streets. Everywhere the laymen have been invited and asked are thinking deeply of the problems in the foreign mission fields.

"It's been a great success from the beginning. Everything has been fine. It was unusual. If women were admitted they would have been called a 'monster meeting.'"

The closing session of the great conference, which promises to be the largest and most enthusiastic of the week, will be held in Tremont temple to-night in Symphony hall. The feature will be the report of the progress of the conference and the decision on a definite policy.

William T. Greenfell, Dr. of Labrador, will be the speaker of the evening. His topic will be "What Are You Doing with Your Lives?"

Addresses will be given by J. Campbell White and others prominent in the conference.

"Tonight's meeting will show the real success of the conference," said J. Campbell White, "and then will we find out just how great it is. At that time, also, will be announced just how much they intend to increase their yearly offerings. Their final response will tell the effect of the movement.

"The conference has been beyond all our expectations. The meetings have been very gratifying.

RESCUES WOMAN AT RISK OF LIFE

Unknown Man Disappears After Heroic Act at South End Fire.

Risking his life to save that of a woman, a man, who, the moment his heroic service had been rendered, plunged into a burning apartment on the first floor of No. 132 East Canton street, yesterday, and carried Mrs. Pierce Williams from her room to safety.

Smoke was seen pouring from the windows of the lower floor of the East Canton street house about 9 o'clock last evening. A crowd gathered quickly and an alarm was rung in.

While neighbors hesitated and wondered if anyone were in the burning apartment an unknown man plunged into the main entrance and disappeared at the door to the apartment. He got no answer and broke open the door. Through smoke-choked rooms the brave man groped his way until he came to where Mrs. Williams was lying half conscious on her bed.

TALKS ON TEETH

Doubters! Ask Some One Who Knows!

When we say that Alvcolar Dentistry will restore diseased or missing teeth without compelling you to wear a plate or ordinary bridge work we don't want you to take our word for it—INVESTIGATE for yourself.

Write to us to-day and we will send you the names of people of standing, people whose names and opinions carry weight and who live in your own city or town—people who have had their dental work done here at this office. Call on them and ask them their opinion of Alvcolar Dentistry and examine the work. Then, when you are convinced, come to us for a free examination of your mouth and we will show you what the Alvcolar Method can do for you.

The advantages of Alvcolar Dentistry are so obvious, its method so much more scientific and permanent than ordinary dentistry, that you will wonder you ever thought of enduring the discomfort and danger of the old-fashioned plate or ordinary bridge work.

Send for a copy of our Free Illustrated Book on Alvcolar Dentistry. It explains the method fully and contains much valuable information on teeth and their proper care. Don't submit to a plate till you have investigated Alvcolar Dentistry fully.

CAUTION—We have no other office in New England.

BABIES REVEL IN FAIRYLAND WHILE TIRED MOTHERS SHOP

Little Folks Make Merry In "Land of Make Believe" and "Castle of Sleep."

A real fairy kingdom for real live fairies! A kingdom of toys and goodies, real toys to play with and real goodies to eat! That's what the "Fairy Kingdom" means.

It's right here in Boston on the busiest part of Washington street near Summer. A dear "mother" woman who loves babies and takes real pleasure in caring for them has opened the place and is always in charge. She is Mrs. H. K. Ellis of Woolaston.

It's a big thing for the babies and even bigger for the mothers. When they want to shop or go to the theatre, they needn't drag the children along to be uncomfortable and make everybody else sorry. They can take them to the "Fairy Kingdom" to play and be happy to their hearts' content. It's a happy arrangement all around.

Real Dishes to Play Party.

"The Kingdom is ideal!"

There are toys and toys, and then some more toys—more than one little boy or girl ever had at home.

There are real tables with real dishes to play party with and all sorts of cookies to serve to all the little "make believe" guests who come to the party, and there are them yourself.

All the children who have been there so far have been as good as gold. They don't cry at all. Why should they? There are enough things to take their attention and amuse them for a week.

And when mother comes back from shopping baby is just gurgling with delight over the most entertaining woolly bear.

Has she been lonesome for mama? Does she want to go home? To all these jealous questions comes the indignant reply: "No, no; play!"

In the Kingdom of Fairies, every one belongs to the same fairy band. The children seem to know this immediately. The other day a little fairy arrived from Brighton, and a four-year old from Allston were playing "party" as though they had been in the same "set" all their lives.

After the party was all over, which wasn't until all the things to eat and do appeared, the Miss from Brighton appeared behind the rocking horse and was galloping away in a big way much to the discomfort of the little maid from Allston. Tots didn't last long, for Miss Allston spied the auto wagon and was soon tearing around the kingdom at high speed, completely outstripping the rocking horse.

"Castle of Sleep" Too.

The Kingdom is divided into two parts. Besides the "Kingdom of Toys," is the "Castle of Sleep."

The castle of sleep has cribs and has sheets all dainty white and sweet.

When the little fairies have played so much and seen so many, many things that their eyes won't [illegible] awake any longer, a beautiful chariot draws up, and away speed the fairies to the "Land of Nod" and the "Castle of Sleep."

Anyway the little resting desk is in great demand. Letters to Santa Claus must be written, the earlier the better. After addressing Santa in the most endearing and pacifying terms, they urge almost every toy ever made and invariably end with "just like they have at the Fairy Kingdom."

One of the children requested a baby sister. Another little girl who saw the letter said, "Oh, I wouldn't ask for a baby sister. The girl next house to us had a baby brother and he was an awful naughty."

It's the most amusing thing to watch the children entertaining each other. One little girl who knew how to sing rendered selection after selection with the others gazing on admiringly.

Sometimes she played her own accompaniment on the little toy piano and in "Cool Days, Cool Days" and "Make You Chineee," even the audience joined in the chorus.

Disagree Over School.

Practically the only disagreement in this congenial company came when someone proposed playing school. There was quite a controversy over the position of teacher. The only boy in the group finally got the [illegible] succeeding in duck and all the pencils and paper. He had the [illegible] and the others were either obliged to attend his school or play truant.

The only way that the mothers can induce the little ones to be coaxed to go home is by promising to bring them back again soon.

The place is sure to be a success. It fills a long felt want. The situation is convenient to all the big stores and the theatres. Mrs. Ellis is such a sensible, motherly woman and has had much experienced with children, that no mother could [illegible] to leave children in her care.

Every mother knows how wearisome it is to have children when she has to drag them from one store to another. And can a boy blame that it continually asks HER mother or HIS mother to stay with them, she is sure to be under some sort of an obligation.

At the cost of a few cents an hour competent nurses at the "Fairy Kingdom" will care for and amuse the children, or if you want to go to the theatre in the evening, one of the nurses will go out to the house and attend to the children there. Only reliable nurses and those in every [illegible] to care for children are connected with the nursery.

Charcoal Purifies Any Breath

And in Its Purest Form Has Long Been Known as the Greatest Gas Absorber.

Pure willow charcoal will oxidize almost any odor and render it sweet and pure. A pailful in a foul cellar will absorb deadly fumes, for charcoal absorbs one hundred times its volume in gas.

The ancients knew the value of charcoal and administered it in cases of illness, especially pertaining to the stomach. In England to-day charcoal poultices are used for ulcers, boils, etc., while some physicians in Europe claim to cure many skin diseases by covering the afflicted skin with charcoal powder.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges go into the mouth and transfer foul odors at once into oxygen, absorb noxious gases and acids, and when swallowed mix with the digestive juices and stop gas making, fermentation and decay.

By their gentle qualities they control beneficially bowel action and stop diarrhoea and constipation.

Bad breath simply cannot exist when charcoal is used. There are no ifs or ands about this statement. Don't take our word for it, but look into the matter yourself. Ask your druggist or physician, or better still, look up charcoal in your encyclopedia. The beauty of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges is that the highest pharmaceutical expert knowledge obtainable has been used to prepare a lozenge that will give to man the best form of charcoal for use.

Pure willow and honey is the result. Two or three after meals and at bedtime sweeten the breath, stop decay of teeth, aid the digestive apparatus and promote perfect bowel action. They enrich the supply of oxygen to the system and thereby revivify the blood and nerves.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are sold everywhere in vast quantities; think they must have merit. Every druggist carries them, price twenty-five cents per box, or send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package by mail, free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 200 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

BOSTON IN UPROAR OVER HARVARD VICTORY.

Thousands of Hilarious Students Revel in Hotel and Theatre District.

1500 HOODLUMS IN RIOT

Six thousand Harvard men, students and alumni, were brought to Boston last night on ten special trains from the field of victory at New Haven, and Boston has not seen such enthusiasm, such a display of joy, such abandon as that disposed by the cheering, shouting, singing, dancing, waving multitude in the second big victory over Yale on the gridiron. As they landed in the South Station they rushed, singing and yelling to Summer street to the mall, down in part of the city.

In the main the student body and their friends kept within the bounds of law and while hilarious were free from riot as the night grew a wild crowd of some 1,500 toys and youths, ranging from [illegible] teen to twenty-five, members of the "Hoodlum," the "Forty Thieves" and the "Cave Village," taking advantage of the license of the night, ran amok through the congested streets.

In Boylston street, the noisiest thoroughfare especially, and in Hotel Touraine, broke the mob up and [illegible] pursued the hoodlums. Later they got together again and [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] the more orderly crowds which paraded in an unending stream along Commonwealth avenue, the principal streets.

Students Do "Zig-Zag."

Ten special trains, bearing [illegible] to handle persons especially [illegible] over the New Haven and the Boston & Albany railroads last night from New Haven. While hundreds alighted at [illegible] thousands remained on the cars [illegible] they reached the South Terminal.

There they formed into regiments and [illegible] the triumphant [illegible] five, eight to twelve men in each doing the famous "zig-zag" and singing the song of victory and fiercely sounding the slogan of old Harvard.

These students swarmed into Tremont, Washington, Boylston, Beach and Avery streets and Harvard place and Chinatown from 8:30 [illegible] until long after midnight.

Every cafe was filled to overflowing and many of them were [illegible] to close their doors as the night grew late, so great were the numbers pressing for admission. Hundreds were also turned away to engage tables at the popular resorts were turned away. Cops were [illegible] with unexpected business in town, and the students spent money like water, their windings at New Haven [illegible] were large.

200 Police on Guard.

Captain Cain of the Lagrange street station had charge of the police detail picked from the fifteen police districts of the city, at intervals of [illegible] during the night all through the district [illegible] arrests were made, for the students had been instructed to use discretion [illegible] in the preservation of order, and to allow some little license provided it was harmless.

RE-ELECT GOMPERS PRESIDENT OF FEDERATION.

James Duncan Again Second in Command of American Labor Organization.

Denver, Col., Nov. 21.—The following officers were elected at to-day's meeting of the American Federation of Labor:

President, Samuel Gompers.

First vice-president, James Duncan of Boston.

Second vice-president, John Mitchell.

Third vice-president, James O'Connell.

Fourth vice-president, Max Morris.

Fifth vice-president, D. A. Hayes.

Sixth vice-president, W. D. Mahon.

Seventh vice-president, Joseph Valentine.

Eighth vice-president, John Alpine.

Secretary, Frank Morrison.

Treasurer, John R. Lennon.

Gompers was unopposed for re-election, and a member of the executive council from the state of Illinois was also unopposed when he refused to stand for re-election for the executive board. Mitchell, a report which said he should withdraw from the contest when he came out for Taft.

The executive council tried to induce Keefe to stand for re-election, but he refused.

William D. Mahon, his successor, is president of the Amalgamated Street Railway Employes. When it appeared that the [illegible] for President Gompers was unanimous, Delegate Charles Dooley, of Massachusetts, the convention, had [illegible] a report which said he should be removed from the council when he came out for Taft.

HONEYMOONERS ON STEAMER CANOPIC

The White Star liner Canopic sailed yesterday for the Azores and Mediterranean ports. She carried 82 saloon, 150 second cabin and 1,355 third class, or steerage, passengers. Mr. and Mrs. Howard W. Ring were on the ship on their honeymoon trip, were invited to the table of a large number of friends from Salem and surrounding towns. Most of the third class passengers are Italians homeward bound for the holidays, and what a merry, prosperous appearing lot.

'WITH COCKTAILS AND CIGARETTES PETER BEGAN MY INITIATION INTO ARMY LIFE'--MRS. HAINS

"He likes me to go to parties by myself. He is quite as much of a mother as I am, and is very happy one."

Shortly after my arrival in the Summer at my mother's, T. Jenkins Hains and his wife unexpectedly arrived.

It was during this visit that his enmity sprung up against me, Mr. Annis. Mr. Annis had invited a party of young people to go automobiling and asked me to join them. Mr. Annis said he would like to take Thornton and his wife, but had no room and would later take him. Thornton took offence. He then declared he would get even with him some day. He has mentioned the circumstance many times since.

"I was enamored of the soldier with the broad stripe on his trousers."

I will never forget a house party which my husband and myself arranged at Fortress Monroe. A number of the young officers of the post attended. Mr. Hains mixed up one of the most deadly punches known to military science. It laid out one young officer in such a condition that everything to him suddenly "went black," and he got as far as the entry to his quarters and collapsed and came to next morning and found himself where he had dropped the night before. Two other officers of the party wandered around the streets of "Harlem" all night.

"When the band was tuned, the guns at Fort Banks boomed a salute."

It was at Fort Banks that I was initiated into the "third degree" of army life. Peter stated that he had taken the responsibility of finishing my education.

His first start was my introduction to the seductive charm of cocktails and the soothing effects of the ladylike cigarettes. The first time I ever saw a woman smoke was a decided shock to me. I was so thoroughly disgusted with my husband laughed at me and told me I would never be a sport unless I did those things.

"My first start in this direction was my introduction to the seductive charms of the cocktail and the soothing effect of the ladylike cigarette."

I Was So Disgusted I Returned Home Vowing Never to Go Back to the Fort Again.

had always wanted a daughter and looked on me as such. We spent two weeks with them and were pleasantly entertained.

We returned to Fort Banks at the end of our honeymoon, and Mr. Hains resumed his military duties.

I passed a very pleasant time in my new home and, aside from having my mop and ash barrel decorated and filled in the guardhouse by an eccentric old commanding officer, I had little that was disagreeable. I recall that one of the army mules kicked the ashcart to kindling wood and was then placed in the guardhouse for his misdeed.

The "Third Degree" of Army Life

It was here, in my new home, that I was consisted of an open grater, built into the wall, where one could roast on one side and freeze on the other. Starting the first few months we took our meals at the Thorndike Hotel, which is the army officers' gambling resort for the fanciest civilian set in the section of Virginia. The most corrupting influence could be found in plenty in the refuge at the fort. In the late Winter we attached the usual Southern negro to our household and commenced housekeeping.

Queer Antics of Officers.

During this time, I will never forget, a house party which my husband and myself arranged at Fortress Monroe. A number of the young officers of the post attended. Mr. Hains mixed up one of the most deadly punches known to military science. It laid out one young officer in such a condition that everything to him suddenly "went black," as he expressed it, and he got as far as the entry to his quarters and collapsed and came to next morning and found himself where he had dropped the night before. Two other officers of the party wandered around the streets of Harlem all night in search of their quarters and they presented sorry appearance to their wives.

At Fortress Monroe I was brought by Mr. Hains into the society of a very fast set, who were distinctly apart from the nicer class who were at the post. Here among this set drinking and cigarette smoking was freely indulged in by the women. It is noteworthy that at every post that I went with my husband he introduced me into the fastest set.

On another occasion at this fort Mr. Hains made myself acquainted a colored officer, who was rated a millionaire, and his fiancee in a sailboat which was chartered at the Thorndike and which they had filled with wine. Coming back the wind much splashing about in mid-stream the crazy idea came to the man that they would visit the warships in the harbor and pay their respects to the officers. Upon arriving at the warships the officers were not on board, the men refused to allow them to land and the dinghy which was trailing behind our sailboat. Both men insisted on stepping into the little craft together on the same side, and incidentally doing the Alphonse and Gaston act, with the result that they were submerged to their armpits in water, and their sticks and wearing apparel went adrift. They were relieved from their embarrassing position by a boat from the warships.

I raised quite a sensation and received considerable attention because I was so young to be married and as a baby. I had a very delightful time at this post as the social life was very gay at the hotels and in the garrison. The women spent their days at the card tables and the evenings were spent in a round of social gaieties at the hotels, clubs and different officers' quarters.

On these occasions the officers made the affair more festive by bringing out their horses. When the ships came in the naval officers joined in with the army and made things lively. When our commanding officer, a crusty old veteran of the army and as the navy, retired, they gave him a grand banquet at the Hampton Club. This club is a most attractive place located in the old Hampton parade ground. The mess halls are a series of low arched rooms filled up with relics of the wars and filled with all the traditions of old wars. The steward of the club was present at the banquet and, for his jokes and punches, and on the night of the celebration he had himself out to surpass his reputation, and incidentally to lay out many of his patrons. Old friends were renewed and old misunderstandings forgotten.

Overpowering Drinks.

Some of the more unguarded, misled by the seductive beverages and all at sea as to their strength, fell victims to the seductive cocktail, which by the way is the most overpowering drink ever invented. I had been a light rum, which turned to me was an awful drink, and, making navigation funny and difficult. When the time came to say good-by to the many friends with whom I had formed pleasant relations the sentiment suddenly gave way to the realization of being past the hour of taps. This came so suddenly out of the darkness that the officers' party, with the exception of the senior, sat down on the walk.

During their helpless condition, he laid aside his gun and stood them up one by one and relieved them of the following morning. One of the officers passed me his belt knife, so he could defend himself if I got too uncertain hand. I remember that Mr. Hains was the last of the following morning climbing, to the amusement of his subordinates, that he was slow.

Young Peter, 3d, was quite a favorite among the colored men and the corporal of the boardwalk in front of the flygeia, that being the son of an army medico. He had an odd-time darky nurse, who felt the importance of her position as a member of an officer's household. She felt very proud of the young charge and would never be far from showing it.

One day on the walk, when discussing with her associates the future of their young charge and predicting great things for them, a once slip of a girl in charge of a baby as large almost as herself, spoke up and said "Toots" would be with them. Old Jemima sharply took her to task, saying, "You gwan, chile, he ain't no other's child," which in her mind put him beyond the pale.

We were ordered to Jackson Barracks, New Orleans, in August, 1902. I did not go at once to our new station, but joined my father and mother at their summer home in Scotland, and I passed a quiet and restful summer among its beautiful hills.

Safe at New Orleans.

Late in the Fall we returned to our above home in Winthrop, where I stayed a few weeks before joining my husband at New Orleans, where we took rooms at the Hotel Bienville.

The garrison is some distance below the city on the river. It is one of the most picturesque garrisons in the army, with its old-fashioned Spanish houses. These form a long square around the parade ground. Huge Spanish bayonets and tropical palms make a very pleasant contrast to the old houses. I look back on my life in the barracks as a time of very great pleasure. We were much like a big congenial family and with few exceptions led a most delightful life. Mr. Hains took a great deal of interest in polo, and with several men from the city and brother officers organized a polo club. This club is a most attractive place located in the old Spanish barracks on the same side of the parade as the post. It consists of a series of low arched rooms filled up with relics of the wars and filled with all the traditions of old wars. The steward of the club was present at the banquet and, for his jokes and punches, and on the night of the celebration he had himself out to surpass his reputation, and incidentally to lay out many of his patrons. Old friends were renewed and old misunderstandings forgotten.

Before he departed, he gave me his autographed picture and took me his address in pleasure. The surroundings of the garrison are very delightful and attractive because of the slaughter house and glue factories and the cemeteries.

Once when a new officer arrived, and before his good-by call he called on a brother officer. He came back to breakfast with a bottle of wine. The officers took on his face. He said there was a dead rat in the wine, in fact, there were several. At first no one caught on, but finally one of the officers said, "Why, that's only Willie Mealy." It was explained to him that the glass in my hand was Willie Mealy after night, and it belonged to Mr. Mealy, hence the name.

While at Jackson barracks I was introduced by my husband to all of the Bohemian resorts in the city, and on one occasion I had a party with the officers and their wives, in company with Mr. Hains and myself, visited all of the resorts and wound up by exploring the mysteries of the old French quarter and the old cemeteries. I got the first fright of the French horrible. The party having assembled in every one of the resorts we had a merry time when they reached home. By this time I was very fond of polo, having learned my lesson, and I retired with a clear head and sober mind.

Taught to Beware.

The incident which taught me that liquor when used indiscriminately was bad for me and taught me to be aware of the flowing bowl was at Baltimore during a visit to my husband's family. Wine was served at the table one day by the general and Mrs. Heine. The wine in question was a very old champagne, and I was induced to partake of a large glassful of the liquor, much more than a person who was unused to the drink would stand.

I slowly and quickly slipped from my chair under the table and I remembered nothing more until Dr. Jenkins, who had been called, administered cold water and I came slowly to.

This was my first introduction and my last, as ever after I was cautious and refused more emphatically. I was dubbed the "White ribbon lady of Maryland" by all those who ever after asked me to imbibe.

Owing to the extreme heat here, I had to leave camp in June with my young son and nurse north. I spent the Summer in Winthrop with my parents and it was during my visit here I met Mr. Annis.

He was introduced into a party of young people at Hingham one day by accident encampment. He was very entertaining, being clever with cards and having a rare fund of good stories. I spent the greater part of my time with my young baby on the beach, and in September joined my husband at Charlestowne Springs, as Mr. Hains's guest.

Shortly after my arrival in the Summer at my mother's, T. Jenkins Hains and his wife unexpectedly arrived one morning and made us a short visit. His wife was one of the most charming women I have ever met and as beautiful as charming. People who knew them said it was through her personality that his stories came to the publishers, and, from what I saw of them and overheard, I believe she aided him largely in the composition of them.

Thornton and Annis.

It was during this visit of Thornton's that his enmity sprung up against Mr. Annis, and through a most trivial incident. Mr. Annis had invited a party of young people to go automobiling and asked me in Thornton's presence to join them. Mr. Annis said he would like to take Thornton and his wife, but had no room and would later take him. Thornton took offence at this and did not hesitate to show it. He then declared he would get even with him some day. He has mentioned the circumstance many times since. I spent the month of September with my husband's people and had a thoroughly uncomfortable time. Mrs. Hains kept to herself, as she was not of the people at the Springs were very coldly disposed toward her. Whatever was the reason I cannot say, but I was made very conscious of the fact that I was not welcome.

Her manner to me was in marked contrast to my cordiality, and I have always regretted her boy's marriage. I went to Fall River in December. My husband and I became persona non grata with the commanding officer and his family and became similar to that of his mother.

The most serious affair of my affections over a will in which one of the soldiers had left a sum of money to Mr. Hains. A dispute arose, which resulted in a court martial. The fellow whom Mr. Hains charged with keeping him from the money was acquitted. My husband claimed he was in the right, but there was too much pull on the other side.

I had a young lady friend from Boston visit me during the Winter, and she helped make my life more enjoyable. She is now with me until April and we came North together on the Comus.

Taught Boy to Swear.

Mr. Hains wrote to Mr. Annis, asking him to meet us in New York and see us safely across the ferry. This was very kindly did. We suffered greatly on our arrival in New York from a chilly snowstorm. Records were broken in that city. New Orleans the weather was warm, the flowers and trees in blossom, and we had made little preparation for the change of suitable clothing.

My second child was born in June at my mother's home in Winthrop. When the baby was a few days old Thornton and his wife came for another visit. It was during this visit that he taught Peter 3d to say the vile things that have been published in the papers.

He taught little Peter to swear great oaths in sailor fashion. His wife (Mary) would beg him not to teach the youngster such things and Thornton would laugh at her and curse her to the utter disgust of everyone.

Thornton was continually twitting his beautiful wife on her love for children, notwithstanding the fact that good medical authority had told him that such would mean death to her. He told her the next time he got married he would get a young girl like Chimie.

(The second chapter of Mrs. Hains's story will be printed in Monday's American.)

Can You Tell the Cause of Your Trouble?

Are you sometimes discouraged, and think you'll never be any better?

Can you tell the cause of your trouble, or what makes you feel blue?

Do you know that about nine-tenths of all sickness is caused by kidney trouble?

Have you ever stopped to think that your kidneys may be the cause of your poor health?

Most people do not realize how much work the kidneys are required to do every day.

Every drop of blood in the body must pass through and be filtered by the kidneys every three minutes a day.

How can they do their work well if they are sick?

If your kidneys need treatment, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the wonderful kidney remedy, will prove to be just the medicine you need.

If you will write to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., every reader of this paper, who has not already tried Swamp-Root, the great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy, may receive a sample bottle by mail, absolutely free. You can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at all drug stores.

When the Blood Goes Wrong

Man Suffers in Many Places Like a City Whose Sewers Spread Disease.

When the blood of man becomes impure and filled with poison and decay, it throws off the impurities and leaves them to force and fester themselves through the skin, just like a city in whose sewers foul gases arise and escape up through cellars into houses, bringing contagion and death.

What a city needs is a generous flow of pure water to carry along and away the sewage which breeds death and disease. What the human body needs for the blood that is impure is a purifier that will stimulate the flow of the precious fluid, that will increase its purities and remove them by the flow of the blood from the system naturally, without irritation, infection and pain.

Calcium Sulphide is the strongest blood purifier known to science and medicine. What pure running water does to the impurities in a city's sewers Calcium Sulphide does for the blood of man.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers give the human body all the strength and vigor of Calcium Sulphide, in better form than any other mode of presenting it to the system. A recent article has stated that most Calcium Sulphide preparations contain not more than one-fifth strength of this wonderful cleanser, the other five being lost by evaporation during chemical changes.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers contain other blood purifiers like Quassin, Golden Seal and Dandelion, each having a distinct function to perform, also an alterative and laxative to throw off through the human sewerage system the bowels the waste and poisonous matter extricated by the blood purifiers.

These little wafers are a tremendous power and act with amazing rapidity in their work of cleansing the blood and clearing the skin. Every druggist carries them in stock; price 50c. per box, or send to your name and address and we will send you a trial package by mail free. Address F. A. Women Freely Drank and Smoked at Fort

SOME of his particular friends used to come frequently to our quarters at Banks and pass the evenings joyously over Scotch and soda and creme de menthe. I went to my mother's home several evenings, so disgusted with what I saw and heard that I inwardly vowed never to go back. These things, however, I kept from my folks.

At Fortress Monroe I was brought into Mr. Hains into the society of a very fast set, who were distinctly apart from the nicer class who were at the post. Here among this set drinking and cigarette smoking was freely indulged in by the women. It is noteworthy that at every post that I went with my husband he introduced me into the fastest set.

MOTHER WAITS BY WINDOW FOR GIRL

Fall River, Nov. 21.—By the long lamp in the window, peering into the darkness, Mrs. Alice Smith watches the cars passing through Brayton avenue, Fall River, all night long for the return of her daughter, Annie Smith, seventeen years old, who left her boarding house in New Bedford, ostensibly to go to work in the Soul mill, early on the morning of November 11 and has not since returned.

"She was a good girl," said Mrs. Smith yesterday. "It's killing me to think she don't come home."

The efforts of her other daughters cannot get her from the window day or night. The spectacle of her face, with tear filled eyes, pressed close against the window pane has aroused general sympathy.

Eleven months ago the father of the missing girl died. The sale of the little cottage in New Bedford followed. The widow and her daughter came to Fall River to live with one of Mrs. Smith's married daughters. After working in the Soul mill one week Annie went back to her old place in the New Bedford mill. Her mother and sweetheart went with her.

The four sisters of the missing girl have visited New Bedford and Fall River but the police confess to be baffled by the disappearance. It is feared that she became temporarily deranged through grieving over the death of her father in the solitude of her boarding house and wandered away, perhaps to die.

NOTED SPEAKERS IN Y. M. C. A. LECTURES

Boston Young Men's Christian Association is going to hold a series of special meetings for men only at the Tremont Theater, beginning Nov. 29, at which time Dr. Josiah Strong, the famous writer and speaker of New York will deliver a lecture on "The religion for the time in which we live."

Dr. Strong is credited with being one of the best speakers in the Eastern States, and this being his first appearance in Boston he will undoubtedly prove to be a good drawing card. On Sunday, Dec. 6, Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, of Brooklyn, will address another meeting in the same theater, his subject to be announced later, while Rev. Charles Hieke, the noted trade union minister, will deliver an address on "The American Workingman," on Dec. 13.

Fred Smith, of New York, a member of the International Committee of the Y. M. C. A., will be the last speaker in the series on Dec. 20, taking for his subject, "A false choice."

Samuel B. Capen will preside over the first meeting. A. H. Chapin the second, John J. Hayes, president of the Boston Central Labor Union, the third, and Joseph Lee, a member of the local Y. M. C. A., who has not yet been decided on, over the last meeting.

These meetings, it is stated, are not for men of Boston only, but for men from all parts. A theories in preference to those of other organizations will be introduced to serve as an educational force in general for men of Boston and the immediate vicinity. No admission fee will be charged.

RARE TECHNIQUE BY VIOLINIST HESS

At the sixth Symphony concert of the season last night Mr. Fiedler presented a most engrossing programme, fine spirit and finish characterizing every number.

Willy Hess was the soloist, playing with the orchestra M Bruch's concerto for Violin No 4. His playing was, as always, a delight—finished, refined and full of feeling. His sympathetic warmth of tone, finest, subtlest, technique and exquisite coloring stamped him as a violinist of unusual ability. He was greeted with warm applause, and at the conclusion of his number the audience showed how to let him go, encoring him time after time until one considered that he could longer bow and smile.

Sibelin's Spring Song and Finlandia, both played for the first time in Boston, were given with all the freshness and vigor which they demand, although there was an occasional lack of finish in the first and observed in the second.

Beethoven's Symphony No. 7, the last number on the programme, was played with ingratiating charm and with a fine feeling for its melodious beauty and the bold, buoyant spirit which underlies it.

At next Saturday evening's concert there will be a recital by Mr. Hess, who will be playing with the orchestra Tschaikowsky's Concerto for pianoforte, in B flat minor, No. 1.

The other numbers will be Strauss's Tone Poem, "Ein Heldenleben," and Wagner's Vorspiel and Liebestod from "Tristan und Isolde."

N.E. GOVERNORS GATHER FOR NOTABLE CONCLAVE.

Unique Assembly Opens To-Morrow to Discuss Problems of New England.

CALL FOR UNIFORM LAWS

Senators, Congressmen and Other Distinguished Officials to Join Debate.

Boston is honored tomorrow by the presence of a convention which for unique ness and dignity combined has never been paralleled in its 300 years of eventful history.

To every person fortunate enough to gain entrance to the Tremont Theatre there will be offered the unprecedented spectacle of all the Governors and Governors-elect seated side by side on the expansive stage, at the First New England Conference on Uniform Laws.

This momentous meeting will also be graced by the presence of United States Senators, members of Congress and other distinguished officials from the six States and the special delegates-at-large appointed by the Chief Executive, who will occupy reserved seats in the front of the auditorium.

The purpose of the conference is best indicated by its name. His Excellency Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., has summoned together the executive and leading citizens of the six New England Commonwealths to consider the common needs of all, especially in the way of speedy enactment of uniform laws.

Subjects for Consideration.

Among the leading subjects to be considered are: The preservation and cultivation of forests; the safe-guarding and promotion of supplies of sea foods; the construction and use highways (with especial reference to the regulation of automobiles).

It will be seen at a glance that every one of these topics is of shared interest to the people of all of the New England States. Inspired by the ideas gained from hearing these questions expounded by experts, with discussion by the delegates ad libitum, the Governors will return to their several capitals prepared to urge uniform legislation tending to advance the interests of not only the citizens of those commonwealths but New England as a whole.

The conference will continue on Tuesday with special subjects for consideration daily.

To-morrow at the opening session, there will be addresses and discussions regarding the growing of fruit trees and the preservation and rebuilding of forests.

Gifford Pinchot to Speak.

The Hon. Gifford Pinchot, president of the National Conservation Commission and National Forester, of Washington, D. C., will speak on "The California of Forest Trees." Special interest is attached to his appearance, not only because he is the first authority on forestry in America, but because he is believed to be marked for the post of Secretary of Agriculture in President Taft's cabinet.

"New England's Opportunity in Orcharding" will be discussed by John Craig, professor of Agriculture in Cornell University.

The devotional exercises will be in charge of the Rev. George A. Gordon, pastor of the Old South Church.

The theatre will be decorated with replicas of historic flags used in New England at different periods of her history. The badge worn by the delegates, of white silk, bears the famous emblem, the pine tree.

The Governors will assemble at the State House at noon, then proceeding to the Hotel Touraine for luncheon. The conference itself starts at 2 o'clock. In the evening the Governors, delegates and strangers will be the guests of Governor Guild at a dinner at the Algonquin Club, where there will be no speaking, only a toast to the President of the United States. The decorations will be apropos of the Thanksgiving season.

Prayer by Archbishop.

Archbishop O'Connell will open the Tuesday session with prayer. Francis H. Herrick, special investigator of the lobster

"Man Is As Old As His Stomach"

This Persian Epigram Is the Real Gauge of a Man's Life.

The Persians were a very sagacious people, noted, among other things, for their deep thinking on life and the things which make up life.

The above epigram shows the wisdom of their thought.

When a man's stomach is able to furnish new material to the system as fast or faster than the natural decay of man requires, then such a man lives his fullest and his best.

When, through wrong living or disease, a man's stomach begins to tax the other organs and takes from the blood strength which it cannot give back in nourishment taken from food, then begins the death of man and he decays fast. The stomach is strong, splendidly strong, and can stand an untold amount of abuse and neglect, but when it dies, man dies.

The stomach gives tons upon tons of good rich blood every year to the system and draws only 600 lbs. of nourishment for its own use. If, however, the food which it receives cannot be turned into blood which is capable of use by the body, then the stomach receives no help from the other organs.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain the most perfect digestive qualities known to science and at the same time the most powerful. They will mix with the poisonous juices of a sick stomach and digest food in spite of this handicap.

They will stop gas making and bad breath. They tone up the nerves of the whole digestive canal, including those of the stomach.

A single ingredient contains strength enough to digest 3,000 times its weight in mixed food.

They have stood the test of time and to-day are more sought after than all their imitators combined.

They are used and endorsed by 40,000 physicians. Every druggist sells them, price 50c. It costs nothing to demonstrate their value. Send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package by mail free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Governors' Messages on the Coming Conference

GOVERNOR GUILD,
Massachusetts:

"WE have eliminated politics entirely. We are coming together for the study of common State interests, to benefit all New England. We hope to secure simpler laws and more uniform legislation, which have become a necessity now that the interests of all the States are so interwoven."

GOVERNOR WOODRUFF,
Connecticut:

"AMONG the greatest needs of all the New England States are uniform automobile laws, the construction of good roads, the preservation and propagation of lobsters, tree planting and the conservation of our forests."

GOVERNOR HIGGINS,
Rhode Island:

"RHODE ISLAND is particularly interested in the question of shell fisheries, in which the State has particulary abundant resources. We are extremely happy to unite with the other New England States along lines which will make for uniformity of legislation to conserve all our natural resources for the benefit of succeeding generations."

GOVERNOR FLOYD,
New Hampshire:

"WE are going into the conference to listen to the views of experts in forestry, protection of supplies of sea food and the construction and use of highways, with the idea of putting into operation such feasible projects as may appeal to us for the benefit of New England in general."

fisheries for the United States Bureau of Fisheries, and Professor in chief of the Department of biology at Western Reserve University, will discuss "The Preservation and Propagation of the Lobster." Modern ideas will be taken up by Dr. George W. Field, former instructor of biology at Johns Hopkins and now chairman of the Fish and Game Commission of Massachusetts.

The subject for Tuesday afternoon will be "Highways and Their Use." The speakers will be: Harold Parker, C. E., delegate to Paris International Congress on Roadbuilding, and chairman Massachusetts Highway Commission; James H. MacDonald, president American Roadside Association; Charles P. Hall, member of High ways of Connecticut; Ex-Governor Nahum J. Batchelder of New Hampshire, Master of the National Grange.

Messages By Governors.

The following statements made to the Boston Sunday American last night show how the governors feel about the conference:

GOVERNOR GUILD—"This conference will be of general benefit to New England. Out of it we hope to secure simpler laws and uniform legislation in matters that affect the New England states in common. The interests of all the New England states are so interwoven that more uniform laws have become as well a necessity as a means for the greater good to New England. We need better roads and better regulation of automobiles. The states acting in agreement can give us these. We need more abundant and cheaper sea food and more generous laws regarding our fisheries. To secure these we need more uniform legislation. And for them we must do something towards preserving the forests and orchards of New England. Politics have been eliminated."

GOV. ROLLINS WOODRUFF OF CONNECTICUT—"The greatest needs of Connecticut and of New England are covered well by the subjects down for discussion at the conference of Governors of Uniform Laws. I would put uniform automobile laws, the question of good roads, the cultivation of lobsters and tree planting and cultivation."

GOV. JAMES H. HIGGINS OF RHODE ISLAND—"Rhode Island looks forward to the meeting of the New England Conservation Commission with great interest. We are interested in the creation of the White Mountain Reserve. In good roads we are also specially interested. We have appropriated many thousands of dollars in grading and maintaining good roads. Our shell fisheries this State has splendid resources, and we also will do all in our power to build up and strengthen the present supply."

GOV. CHARLES M. FLOYD OF NEW HAMPSHIRE—"There is the first object in this gathering of Governors and delegates to listen to views of experts in the lines of forestry, the protection and promotion of supplies of sea food and the construction and use of highways. We are going to derive from such knowledge as we can, with the idea of putting into operation feasible projects for the benefit of the people of New England in general."

GIVES OWN SKIN TO SAVE SISTER

Very Hardie, the beautiful nineteen year-old Lynn girl whose scalp was torn off by a belt in the box factory where she was employed, will leave the Lynn Hospital tomorrow for the Massachusetts General Hospital, where her brother Chester will undergo an operation to have the skin taken from his body to be grafted on her head and forehead.

Chester is seventeen years old and is a student at the Lynn High School. He has been at the bedside of his sister constantly since her accident, and when it was learned that such an operation would be necessary he volunteered to submit to having the skin removed from his body.

SAYS DEPOSITORS CAN PAY BANK DEBT

Providence, R. I., Nov. 21.—In the Superior Court here today Attorney Angell of the law firm of Edwards & Angell, representing the Central Trust Company of Providence, which closed its doors about two weeks ago, asked that the court postpone the appointment of a permanent receiver for at least four weeks.

Mr. Angell said that plans were on foot looking to the reorganization of the bank and the payment to the depositors in full, as well as the reopening of the institution. Mr. Angell said that he felt sure the bank could raise enough money to pay off its indebtedness of $2,000,000 among 3,000 depositors, the largest of whom had not more than $5,000 in the bank.

PRESIDENT'S COUSIN TAKEN CAPTIVE BY CUPID.

Miss Katherine Roosevelt, Noted Whip, to Be Bride in Spring.

TELLS OF HER BETROTHAL

Bachelor Maid of Society Will Take Pets of Stabe to New Home.

By Maxine Gregory.

Boston Society—particularly the smart hunting, riding and athletic set—is grasping with surprise at the announcement of the engagement of Miss Katherine Roosevelt, cousin of President Roosevelt, to Stanley Reeve of Philadelphia.

Everyone is saying: "Well, well! Katherine Roosevelt—and we always regarded her as the bachelor girl par excellence. Engaged—Stanley Reeve of Philadelphia—well, well!"

They are all so surprised to hear that Katherine Roosevelt would wed—all except Miss Katherine herself.

And thereby hangs a tale.

After a call on Miss Katherine at her farm at Millis yesterday, I came back to town in quite an amusing frame of mind and with some reconstructed ideas.

Who said Miss Roosevelt is masculine and mannish and uppishly independent and so given over to horses and dogs and all sorts that she is not sweetly feminine? Katherine Roosevelt, like any other girl in the first flush of her betrothal, is frankly pleased. She is natural, not an iceberg a bit, like any other girl would. She talks with modest reticence about her fiance—not more—wouldn't be sweetly, but just as any other nice girl might. And just as any other girl she also likes to talk—him—about the engagement, that is to say.

They do tell—do use a homely expression—that Katherine Roosevelt laughed ruthless to girlish scorn. She never would wed, not she. Now that her engagement was announced I was prepared to be frozen stiff and to be told, with almost masculine brusqueness, that she did "not care to discuss personal affairs."

But a girl is a girl and an engagement is an engagement and Miss Katherine is a girl and she is engaged and she is very feminine and very sweet about it all.

Buys Farm at Millis.

Maybe, if she was oddly independent and had singular ideas about a bachelor-girl life, she has changed her mind. Who knows? Anyhow, it's "all off," as they say, with the would-be bachelor girl, and Miss Katherine is pleased to be congratulated.

May be Society, wise Society, with its smart omniscience, has been worsted in error regarding Miss Roosevelt and her alleged confining fondness for horses and dogs and her disregard for men.

But then, Society only took what it actually saw on the outside. It knew that Miss Katherine was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Bowdoin of Beacon street.

It knew that she was always devoted to riding, to driving, that she was an enthusiastic competitor at horse shows, that she rode and drove with almost uncanny skill, that she knew a good horse when she saw one, that she did not seem fickle-minded every time an eligible young man said her flattering attention and that she had a mind of her own.

When Miss Katherine elected last June to buy a farm with her own funds—she had plenty of money—to live there by herself and forsake Society and its formal rules, then Society was sure she was a flirt, was one so far as men and marriage were concerned. "And only twenty years old, poor thing," said Society.

But Miss Roosevelt cheerfully bought her farm at Millis and went out there with her friend, Mrs. N. Herrick, to chaperon, with her string of horses, her couple of dogs and her motor cars—and I didn't know about the cats, by the way. All Miss Katherine has given to herself yesterday.

And then Miss Katherine would a-farming go. She stayed on the farm and was to be a bachelor maid and then she went and got herself engaged, she did.

A Real, Royal Greeting.

On the drive in the deeply carriage-furrowed Millis road to Miss Katherine's farm—I had a chance to see that Millis is a pretty town.

After a little jogging up hill and down the road arrived at the farm.

Such a pretty place! A large two and one-half story house, a remodelled stable in the rear, a broad lawn, great trees and a view of a rocky-edged lake.

There was Miss Katherine at the door, needing some petting, greeting. And there was the masculine, mannish maid of Society, pardon?

Not here. This young hostess—she can be very sweet—was the essence of youthful femininity. There were the peaches and cream complexion, set off by the eyes of deep blue gray. The golden hair was coiled and dressed. Crossed love at the nape of the neck.

There was a plain little skirt, clearing the piazza floor by some four or five inches. There was a first object in the coat would have been rather mannish, but it was tailor-fitted. Under the coat was a vest, collar and four-in-hand, all trig and neat and prim.

Miss Katherine returned the greeting pleasantly, and, when asked if she had a few minutes, replied she is.

In the hallway I had my way to one of the front rooms, saying with a grin that the room seemed there are some girls in there, come this way.

One could not but admire her unaffected manner and wholesome girlishness.

Wedding Bells in Spring

Once in the room, she looked up with inquiring eyes. I explained that I was receiving congratulations." Miss Roosevelt was. She said, with a happy little smile of shyness. Then the "just girl" came out, as she added demurely: "You won't tell people how much I giggle, will you?"

And that leading remark from a girl supposed to be stand-offish and frightfully independent and haughty and all that.

"That comes from good health," I replied.

"I know nothing else," said Miss Katherine.

My glance had strayed in admiration to the vase after vase of roses and chrysanthemums.

"I'm very fond of flowers," said the girl simply, "but I don't raise them. That is, at least, I didn't raise these. But I did plant some seeds. They didn't come up. It's a sad story."

Again that smile of mock seriousness.

"Now," I said, "won't you tell me a little about the very fortunate man and when and where you met?"

The reply was straightforward.

"He is Mr. Stanley J. Reeve of Philadelphia. He is not a college man. He is in the insurance business. We shall be married in the Spring. The exact date is not set. I cannot tell you when or where we met. That is our own little secret. No one else shall know it."

Crisply and clearly and cheerfully told I hesitated to get more.

"Shall you dispose of your farm here?" I asked.

"I shall stay on the farm this winter, but shall probably dispose of it before the Spring. I shall take my horses to Philadelphia. I shall take my dogs and the four family horses which I have on the place, my eight dogs and, perhaps, my two cats. By the way, Dan Patch won four ribbons at Mr. Higginson's horse show at Dover last month."

Bostonians recall the bad accident Miss Roosevelt had last spring at the Country Club when one of her riders was hurt in a fall from her horse in one of the jumps. A natural inquiry was made as to the affected ankle.

"I have entirely recovered from my accident," said Miss Roosevelt, "it rides and drives around this beautiful country every morning and I follow the hounds with the Norfolk Hunt Club, of which I am a member."

Another question to this Frank and charming young dancer:

"Shall you participate in society dances a great deal this winter? Will you attend Miss Ethel Roosevelt's coming-out ball at the White House on January 8?"

"I shall not attend the ball," was the immediate answer. About Philadelphia society—well, I don't expect to go there, but I see what it is like. But I don't know much for that matter—I'm a country girl."

That was all the interview.

I received from Millis, and I received myself:

"Happy girl—lucky man."

SEN. CHANDLER'S AMAZING THEORY OF FUTURE LIFE

My faith in a future life is strong and ever present with me. It is only faith. We have no knowledge and it is intended that we shall not have knowledge. We do not live as disembodied spirits, we go to some one of the stars, where we inhabit new physical bodies, which embrace our present Souls. We see and hear and have the senses of taste, smell and touch; and perhaps other and more joyous senses. Recently I have found this idea expressed in Rev. Dr. Gordon's helpful book "The Witness of Immortality"

HUB TO WELCOME CONDUCTORS IN MAY

Committee Sees "Clear Tracks" Ahead for Railwaymen's Convention.

Boston, for the first time in twenty-five years, will have the honor of entertaining the conductors and the women's auxiliary. The dates are May 11 to 20, inclusive. The convention will be held at Ford Hall and the headquarters will be at the Parker House.

The three local divisions, whose total membership approximates 1,800, will be the hosts and about 2,000 men and women are expected. Now here's a funny thing. Though the men will come from Canada, Mexico and Canada, for the order is of North America, all will have free rides here and back to their destinations.

Paid Out $11,000,000.

The grand division conventions are now held biennially. The order was founded in 1868 by conductors of the Illinois Railroad for benevolent and fraternal purposes. It has since paid out over $11,000,000 in death and disability claims.

So busy May if you see a happy looking man decked with a tri-colored ribbon of red, white and green, you may rest assured he is a boss of some particular train, freight or freight.

SEEK TO CURE ILLS OF MANKIND AS DID THE SAVIOUR

GOSPEL OF NEW FAITH CURE HAILED BY THOUSANDS.

"Emmanuel Movement," Led by Boston Pastor, Spreads Over Two Continents.

HEED MASTER'S COMMAND

Religion, Medicine, Psychotherapy, Summoned by Dr. Worcester in Great Work.

BORN of religion, the science of medicine and the knowledge of the mind and soul, psychotherapy, or mind healing, this New Gospel of Health is to-day being preached and accepted far and wide over this land and in England, France and Germany, originating in this city, in Dr. Elwood Worcester's Emmanuel Episcopal Church, and under the medical name of the "Emmanuel Movement," this most recent application of the truths of religion, medicine and psychology to mortal ills has been attended by remarkable results.

It is not a "new faith" its teachings are as old as the Christian era, for Jesus Christ practiced healing and taught self-healing when he inspired faith as a requisite to cures in those He made well. "Believe and thou shalt be made whole" was what He said.

While the Emmanuel movement was practically begun in Boston but two years ago, its spread has been marvelous, although it has been little advertised. And now to propagate the combination of "Purpose and practical cure" "The League of Right Living" is being organized to teach this new gospel to every creature.

Spreads Over the Land.

The Emmanuel movement, under its new name, Psychotherapy, has spread to Chicago, New York, Rochester, Northampton, Newark, Detroit, Buffalo and Brooklyn, and the end is not yet, for inquiries are coming in from its practical founder, Dr. Worcester, from all over this and far distant countries.

Conservative St. Mark's Church, New York, took begin the new work, and Dr. Worcester delivered a lecture on "The origin and Idea of the Emmanuel Movement" at Trinity Parish House, Lincoln, Hall, Portland street and Broadway, on Friday morning, October 30, and at Georges Memorial House on the "Relation Disorder of the Nervous System."

These lectures are to be followed by a certain conference series on the relations between mind and health, moral health and physical health, and their relations, abnormal, its cause and cure; habit and sleep, and the church's duty toward the sick.

Church clubs, where clergymen, physicians and psychists meet patients, diagnose their cases and supply proper remedies, are springing up all over this and foreign lands and the work of the material healers is to be supplemented by those who heal soul and mind.

Rt. Rev. Samuel Fallows, presiding Bishop of the Reformed Episcopal Church in America, living in Chicago, speaking of the new movement, says: "The new union of religious mental and medicinal healing, says:

Heed Master's Command.

"The time is ripe that Christ's ministers should heed the Master's command to 'heal the sick.' Medicine realizes to-day, largely as the result of the work of its own leaders, that it has everything to gain by welcoming the aid and advice of ministers of religion in the treatment of nervous disorders.

"I predict the rapid growth of the Christian Psychology movement throughout the country.

"Letters are constantly coming to me from the clergy of almost every faith, denomination expressing profound sympathy and asking for specific advice how to aid them in the conduct of church clubs. The demand is even greater from men and women in all walks of life asking for educational treatment in the way of right thinking, right feeling and right purpose.

"These inquirers want to know how to keep well so much as how to bring back health when it is gone.

"There is a distinct cleavage between Christian Psychology and Christian Science. The cardinal principles of psychotherapy are:

"Faith is a dynamic force.

"It is utter folly to neglect prayer.

"All the universe is dependent upon God's care.

"The therapeutic value of love cannot be overestimated.

"Be of good cheer."

Noted Men in Work.

In the scientific world psychotherapy has enrolled such men as the famed Hobbs of Bergue, Jastrow of the University of Wisconsin, Peterson of Columbia, Jackson of the Harvard Medical School; Royce, Harvard's professor of philosophy; Woodworth, Columbia's psychologist; Southard, the neurologist of Harvard, and such able minds as Corlet of the Bowdoin College Medical School of Hartford, McComb of Boston, S. Weir Mitchell of Philadelphia, and a host of men equally distinguished in their fields of endeavor.

To-day cures are held where the sufferings of many are removed or lessened, and many are made whole nightly. There is one such in Chicago, where Bishop Fallows in person conducts the clinic; another in New York city, where Dr. Batten does this service, a third and most important by the title city, where Dr. Worcester, in the two years of his practice, has cured thousands.

To the man or woman inquisitive as to the class of people to whom this new faith appeals, the answer is: It appeals first to those who have lost hope in medicine; second, to those who have lost hope of social conditions for the basis of the cult is Christian in its fullest sense, that is, faith in religion which is of God; faith in medicine, which is nature's curative agency, and faith in man through the soul within him.

First of all, Good Morals.

It teaches a man that if his religion that is, his morals are bad, his health must be bad; that where his morals need a cure, no physician alone can accomplish it without the aid of a physician of the church to direct the patient in the immediate moral pathway that he should pursue.

Then, too, these two physicians agree that betimes there is need of the services of a third man, schooled in psychology—a man who knows the soul of the man of to-day with relation to its immediate atmosphere—the thoughts it thinks, the ideas it germinates, the suggestions it receives from the environment of home, companions, business and aspirations.

Psychotherapy as applied to the Emmanuel movement, makes medicines, electricity and nerves interdependent. To separate one from the other has been the error of the past, according to the new teachings. The leaders of the movement claim that a man's entire nature—his spiritual health influences his bodily condition. His work, they say, the way he does it, the spirit he puts into it, his satisfaction he gets out of it, are controlling factors in the making of a healthy or unhealthy man.

They say that the health of the mind is controlled largely by healthy home conditions, by personal friendship, by family affections, by the daily intercourse between man and man in business and social life. The Emmanuel movement seeks to know these conditions, that it may correct the ills of the inner man as a lever to correct the ills of the outer man.

Builds Up Character.

"It builds itself," says Dr. Richard M. Cabot of the Harvard Medical School, "with the ideas that are floating through the public head—ideas long imagined, but never put into practical use. Its aim is character and it can do a great deal toward curing the type of diseases known as functional where there has been no widespread destruction of tissues or organs, as happens in organic disease.

Dr. Cabot asserts that if your heart or your stomach misbehaves it is within the scope of psychotherapy to cure it, except in incurable cases, for every physician knows that all bodily troubles be they functional or not, perhaps a half are functional. He holds that any one can do a great deal toward curing the bodily ills of their friends, but that those who can do it best are the physicians who are too much busy.

Another point that Dr. Cabot lays great stress on is that volunteer and physician cannot of themselves correct or cure the ills that psychotherapy aims at.

"Still further," he says, "these men must go to their aid the specialist, the expert in the remolding of shattered personalities through the influence of sound argument and friendly advice, and through modifications of the domestic and industrial environment."

As Old as History.

Of those who have allied themselves with this movement, which Bishop Fallows last week announced had now become universal in its scope and work, is Dr. Paul Dubois of the University of Berne, Switzerland. He has written books about it, has lectured abroad for many years upon it, and is today its ablest exponent in Europe.

The Roman Catholic Church has lately recognized its importance in a book bearing the imprimatur of Archbishop Farley, of New York, entitled "Pastoral Medicine." It is the work of Dr. Alexander E. Sanford and the Rev. Walter Drum.

In England Miss Emily Bovill and Lloyd Tuckey, noted neurologists, and Canon Wilberforce have advocated the new faith, and the Canon has held special services at London to urge its acceptance by the people.

The history of psychotherapy is as old as mankind itself. It was practiced for years in old Europe before it had the formidable name that science has given it. It received, however, its latter-day impetus about twenty-five years ago, when Emanuel Friend and other gained a new impulse by their researches and teachings and it was taken up by the few people that were capable of grasping its broad, liberal principles. Emanuel, Tuckey, Vogt, Dubois and men of that ilk.

Foundation of the Faith In the New Testament

PSYCHOTHERAPY finds its religious basis in the Bible, where is told of Christ's healing of the sick. Here are some extracts on the subject:

Matthew, iv, 24—And His fame went throughout all Syria, and they brought unto Him all sick people that were taken with divers diseases and torments, and those which were possessed with devils and those which were lunatics, and those which had the palsy, and He healed them.

Matthew x, 1—And when He had called unto Him His twelve disciples, He gave them power against unclean spirits, to cast them out, and to heal all manner of sickness and all manner of disease.

Matthew x, 8—Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils; freely ye have received, freely give.

Mark ii, 2-5—And they watched Him whether He would heal them on the Sabbath day, that they might accuse Him. And He saith unto the man which had the withered hand, Stand forth. And He saith unto them, Is it lawful to do good on the Sabbath days, or to do evil? to save life or to kill? But they held their peace. And when He had looked around about on them with anger, being grieved for the hardness of their hearts, He saith unto the man, Stretch forth thy hand. And he stretched it out: and his hand was restored whole as the other.

Dr. Worcester Says Medical Co-operation Is Necessary

THIS movement is not an innovation or a new cult. Our sermons are not centred in it, although it makes them deeper—of greater significance. But the movement may be but one department of every well-organized church. This psycho-therapeutic work, social work and religious work must go on together.

Six out of ten—I think even more—who come to us want spiritual help quite as much as bodily aid. It is this tremendous fact that has made the enormous spread of the healing cults possible.

I do not think any clergyman should go into this work without medical co-operation. That is the one distinguishing feature of the Emmanuel movement. We insist on medical co-operation. —THE REV. DR. WORCESTER, head of "The Emmanuel Movement" of Boston.

BRIDAL SECRET TRAVELED FAST

You See the Bride Told a Newspaper Man All About It and Then—

After one has taken a secret, chlorform it in the parlor, tied it up with a pretty ribbon and laid it away on the top shelf of the family closet, it is expended a bit discomforting to find a visitor in the parlor who wants to ask the most personal questions about it.

Al Beverly is amused over the efforts of Reporter Miss Alice Carlson and John Albert Peterson to conceal the presence of a new wedding certificate in the Carlson home at No. 21 Herrick street.

The young woman and Peterson decided to go to Providence last Saturday and get married. After Thanksgiving proved rainy they were to give the news to Beverly and a few friends on Sunday.

"Please, we have just been married," explained the pretty couple Mrs. Peterson to the Providence Journal office after the wedding. "And we rushed back home, it rained in every inch across it.

"Say, of course not," said the grave faced reporter, pressing for a pad of paper. "Of course not."

The Petersons returned to Beverly Sunday night.

"Are you and John going to Pye here?" inquired a brisk young man of the new Mrs. Peterson, found in the parlor early Monday morning.

"Why?" said she, "who told you about it?"

The visitor waved his arms eloquently.

"It's all over town," he said.

"Say, what do you think of that?" she gasped. "I never told a soul but that newspaper man."

At this her father, Thomas Carlson, foreman in the United States Leather Works came in.

"Guess we'll have to get busy on the celebration then," he said.

The bride is just eighteen. She is a graduate of the Salem Commercial School. Her husband is twenty-two.

RABBI'S WIFE ASKS COURT FOR DIVORCE

St. Joseph Mo., Nov. 21—Mrs. Sarah Kantor has filed a suit here for divorce from Rabbi Samuel Kantor, of Shaan Shalem Temple, one of the largest Jewish congregations in the city.

She alleges abandonment and says Kantor beat her. They were married five years ago in New York.

ATHLETES TO FETE CHANNEL SWIMMER

Samuel Mahony, Revere Life-Saver, to Be Presented with Silver Cup.

Arrangements for the banquet and reception to be tendered Samuel Mahony by his Revere friends, at Parker Hall, Beach road, Tuesday evening, have been completed.

The reception is the first given the famous swimmer since his successful feat in swimming the English Channel, and organizations to which Mahony is a member have joined to make the affair a success.

The Revere Aerie of Eagles, Cherry Island Yacht Club and Corps No. 35 of the Volunteer Life Saving Service, of which Mahony is captain, have appointed committees, and the banquet and silver cup will be presented in the summer.

Mrs. Mahony will tell in detail of the swim, when she entered the water at Dungeness, France, at 9:30 o'clock on the morning of September 11, and was taken out at Sandgate, Eng., the following day at 5 p. m. She was in the water twenty hours, and although he is not accredited with the swim by some writers, he has affidavits from the men who accompanied him, and his Revere friends have no doubt but he accomplished the feat.

Many prominent swimmers and athletes have been invited to attend the reception. Among the guests will be many Olympic contestants, former rowing mates of Mahony, etc.

Mayor Hurley and Congressman John A. Keliher will attend the banquet and make addresses.

The committee in charge of the affair consists of John W. Carney, chairman; Austin McLaine, secretary; William W. Welch, treasurer; Charles Crane, Captain William Daly, Thomas H. Willis and R. F. Webber.

'HOODOO' FIRE TRUCK IS SOLD TO BOSTON

Watertown Again in Market for Apparatus After Disastrous Attempts.

Watertown's "hoodoo" fire truck, that was ordered by the town because it was too heavy, has been sold by the American La France Ladder Company to the city of Boston. It will be used on the Longwood avenue engine house in Roxbury.

Watertown, after several vain attempts to secure a truck that will be suitable, is still in the market, and the matter was again asked for bids. The original truck is declared practically useless and out of date. A second purchase some time ago was too long for the engine house and after the house had been enlarged to accommodate the truck, it was found that it would be advisable to abandon attempts to use the truck. The third bid was put in by the Boston, was 1,000 pounds over weight and Selectman declined to accept it from the company.

NEW CUNARD PIER FINISHED IN JUNE

That the new Cunard pier in East Boston, to take the place of the one which was destroyed by fire last June, will be completed by next June and that ocean liners will dock there by that time, is the declaration of officials of the Boston & Albany Railroad Company, who have awarded the contract for building the substructure with the understanding that it will be completed by next March 1. Work on the superstructure of the pier will begin as soon as the substructure is ready, and the terminal, expected to be ready by June, will be the pier of any in the country. It will be built of concrete and steel, as nearly fireproof as possible, and will be so arranged that it will be an utter impossibility for a conflagration to start there. Many new plans, drawn from researches made in other countries, will be introduced. Special attention will be made for the safety of the passengers of the ocean liners and for the immediate transportation of freight.

'Happy Home Helps Cure Drink Habit'

Aid of Wives Necessary in Reform Work, Says Ernest Jacoby, Head of Emmanuel Social Service.

THAT selfishness is the root of nearly all mental disorders including environment and hereditary ailments, and that the curse of drunkenness may be made permanent by proper environment, are among the beliefs of Ernest Jacoby, a prominent Boston business man who has been selected superintendent of the newly organized special service department of Emmanuel Church.

Mr. Jacoby believes that the wives of many men are responsible for their husbands' drinking habits. He says that in order to save a man from his appetite for liquor it is often necessary to treat two or three members of the family, including the wife, in order to bring about the reformation. The object of the social service department of the Emmanuel movement is to go into the home and improve conditions there in order to bring about a permanent cure.

A large number of prominent Boston men and women have allied themselves with the new movement. Dr. Richard Cabot of the Massachusetts General Hospital is the chief adviser of the committee. Workers will visit homes and try to make them more pleasant, at least to make them more attractive than saloons.

"Environment has a great deal to do with the cure of a man suffering from alcoholism or from mental disorder of any kind, either of which is nervousness," said Mr. Jacoby to a Sunday American reporter.

Much Depends on Wife.

"In our failures to cure alcoholics permanently we find in nearly every case that it is a case of 'seek the woman.'

"If a man has a bottle of beer before him, the drinking of which will put him in a happy frame of mind, and irritable wife at home, it is not hard to guess which he will choose. Men seek happiness. That is why they often go into a saloon rather than go home to a nagging wife. In a case like this we must get at the cause—we must go to the nagging wife and cure her of that habit. We must treat her differently.

"In some instances the wife proves her self a filthy creature, or is selfish or inconsiderate of her husband's welfare.

"It is not rather that a man prefers to go into a saloon than to go to a filthy home? The saloon must be made to look like a home cheerful and attractive if they would keep men away from it.

"If the home is kept clean and attractive, and if the husband does not spend his time in a saloon. In one case of this nature which we met and taught the woman how to make home attractive. The woman took to housework as the root of her mental disorders. Were we to deal with her husband and conversation for our fellow beings, nervous disorders would have appeared.

"Our minds are so made that the practice of helping others develops a noble spirit, inspires and strengthens while brooding and concentration on ourselves destroys energy, saps our strength.

"Nag" Caused His Downfall.

"One of the objects of our new work is to show the patients the opportunities for service that lie all around them to find contentment of mind and where these opportunities do not exist we try to supply them.

"I have in mind an instance of where we supplied just such an opportunity. A very well to do old case. A man who had been a drunkard for fifteen years was cured by us and has been straight for nine months. He was a pedler of fruits and vegetables. After becoming a cure for these nine months he said he was going to give up his route.

"We investigated the case and learned why he contemplated such a step. It was because his wife was obliged to wait on his route when sick and he was afraid that if he went to the people missed him sooner the horse, passing him by. We suggested that he keep his route and giving him other equally encouraging reasons induced him to do so. He has since got good his wife's route because of her health and is now doing well. He says the horse missed him and got discouraged, so he took to drinking again.

"We saved the problem by buying him a team and he is now a new man and is quite prosperously paying but has paid back much money we advanced for the cure of his case. The constant nagging of people and actually driven him back to drink.

Woman Cured of Fears

"Another instance of where we supplied opportunity for working in cure here: self. She was possessed of all kinds of fears. She was afraid to go on cars and elevated. She was afraid to go on an electric car.

"We got her interested in a family member of which we were treating for alcoholism. This gave her an opportunity to do something in her power to help. She was afraid to go to the house. The first few times she was afraid to go to the house alone. Then she went with her. Finally we had her mother-in-law come to her house. Then she made her come home alone. The next time she went she took a car.

"She so much enjoyed the work of helping others that she forgot about her own troubles. She is absolutely cured and is now engaged for other cases and is coordinating her philosophy.

"Another case in which work is being done, while others have not enough. They both require our assistance. In one case the real trouble is that the husband does not like his work. One of the principal objects of our work is to get the right man in the right place. Many a man is worse off than they are. In my opinion there is no greater privilege than to bring the satisfaction of being able to bring a man to the realization of the right work for which he is troubled.

"Our work is entirely undenominational. We try to help those of every religion. We do not try to get a man to go to any particular church on the other hand, we try to bring out patients nearer their God. We try to use that which is the greatest thing in all religions—love and prayer.

"As a nurse is necessary in a hospital to assist the physician or surgeon, so in mental diseases it is necessary that the patient should be fed with healthy food during the course of treatment. In order to make the cures permanent it is necessary to surround the patient with a healthy church.

Appeals to Those Without Hope in God or Medicine.

TO the man or woman inquisitive as to the class of people to whom this new faith appeals, the answer is: It appeals first to those who have lost hope in medicine; second, to those who have lost hope of social conditions—for the basis of the cult is Christian in its fullest sense, that is, faith in religion, which is of God; faith in medicine, which is nature's curative agency, and faith in man through the soul within him.

It teaches a man that if his religion—that is, his morals—are bad, his health must be bad; that where his morals need a cure, no physician alone can accomplish it without the aid of a physician of the church to direct the patient in the immediate moral pathway that he should pursue.

Then, too, these two physicians agree that betimes there is need of the services of a third man, schooled in psychology—a man who knows the soul of the man of to-day with relation to its immediate atmosphere—the thoughts it thinks, the ideas it germinates, the suggestions it receives from the environment of home, companions, business and aspirations.

Make Goal Worthy of Effort.

"One no wonder I, a consultation in Psychology and Social Science with great importance laid on the cure of saving character and mentality.

"The only reason a man drinks a glass of beer is because he likes it, and because of the frame of mind it gives him. The object of our work is to show him that or a better frame of mind by making him realize that which will relieve his health or moral failure. Sometimes it is not enough to take away the thing that ails a man. In addition to taking it away you must supply something else. Perhaps the best way to do this is to furnish a healthful environment through Kindness Wins Sufferer.

"Lack of encouragement is one of the chief causes of much drunkenness to-day. Many of the cases of nervous collapse, insomnia and even dipsomania have been caused through lack of encouragement and social starvation.

"I remember an extraordinary case and yet it was a perfectly natural one, of a man who came to the Emmanuel Church through the advice of a friend. He had been drinking heavily and refused to discontinue. He was examined by the physician and the diagnosis was certainly very discouraging. He had a bad case. In addition he had tried to make him regard me as his friend and he did.

"The poor fellow could not quite understand why I was taking a strong interest in him. I discovered that he had no friends and no living soul. He began drinking by taking a glass of beer every night to tone and make him sleep. The habit grew and he took more and more until he was a slave of alcohol. This man said good than a dozen whiskies. This man is was saved. He is now an honored man. He is now a total abstainer. He is now a total abstainer. He is now a total abstainer

MUNSTERBERG STIRS PROHIBITIONISTS TO NEW WRATH.

Harvard Professor Returns to Attack by Declaring Their Minds Are Clouded.

PERIL IN PROHIBITION

Legislation Cannot Change Human Nature, He Says; Hope in Education.

After scoring prohibition as impracticable and wrong, and after rousing the Prohibitionists to wrathful replies, Professor Hugo Munsterberg of Harvard University is pending the Prohibitionists' attack still further anger by telling them in a lecture that they do not even think clearly.

He is telling them more things, too, in dispensing and responding matters. He says abstinence legislation deprives millions of a harmless lawful feeling.

These words alone, however, are powerful enough to bring down upon him the bitterest antagonism from the Prohibition supporters.

An article by Professor Munsterberg in the coming issue of Everybody's Magazine, entitled "Prohibitionists and Psychology," has called down on the head of the author criticisms of the severest and emphasis. He was mentioned in no flattering terms in the Prohibition stump during the recent campaign.

"Disgrace to Harvard."

Allen S. Watkins of Lynn, Vice-Presidential candidate of the Prohibition party, said in a campaign speech:

"Hugo Munsterberg is a disgrace to Harvard. If the university continues to tolerate him, Harvard will soon become a disgrace to the world. He is a disgrace and an enemy to the well-being of the community."

This was only a sample of the contents of visits of Harvard professors which were aimed at Professor Munsterberg.

Professor Munsterberg is man of note, a scientist of the highest order, a man paying debts. He has not said he is disgusted with the Prohibition movement, which looks upon him as the Prohibitionists' champion, but he has expressed his views, and the following extracts from remarks from the Professor in the Prohibition hall will find more authentic expression in his article.

Professor Munsterberg favors prohibition of the evils of intemperance, but not the means now being employed. He says on the general question:

"Saloon Atrocious Insult."

"Alcoholic temperance is one of the greatest problems of human culture, being the direct cause of a large part of crime, of poverty, of illness, of insanity, of early death, and, in the second generation, of idiocy and degeneracy.

He further to comfort the Prohibitionists:

"The American saloon is a most atrocious insult to decent social life. Its influence on corrupting politics and on intemperate habits is detestable."

But after that he says that so far as the harmony with the Prohibition viewpoint is concerned:

"I am fully convinced that under the present conditions of American life, the only wise way of fighting is by working toward temperance and not toward prohibition.

"It must be a campaign of education toward a moderate use of light alcoholic beverages."

Rouses "Cold-Water" Wrath.

That sentiment, the keynote of his opinions on the liquor question, is directly opposite the Prohibition teachings.

It does not, however, place Professor Munsterberg against everything the anti-rum party teaches, but only against some practices.

Anyone at all familiar with the Prohibition platform, however, will see how sharply smack this is to the face of the "White Ribbon" enthusiasts.

The Prohibitionists advocate cold water, but never such a cup of cold water as that which Professor Hugo Munsterberg has thrown at them.

Another thing which angers the Prohibitionists is Professor Munsterberg's early statement that he had viewed drunkards in a psycho-therapeutic journey.

The "White Ribbon" claim is that the Munsterberg policy would make drunkards instead of curing them. Yet the professor asserts he has not only effected cures by psycho-therapeutics, but has made scores of cures.

Look at the broadstatesy of it, says the Prohibitionists, it is a man who, by an occasional spree, by extra copies of drunken revelry on the next breath, advocates moderate use of alcoholic beverages.

In his latest reply Professor Munsterberg says the Prohibitionists have misquoted him. He alludes to a whole literature of so-called replies" which appeared since his magazine article. Then he adds:

Denunciation Falsification."

"There was no lack of vehemence and an abundance of misstatements, and even the excitement of the presidential campaign would not be sufficient to expose the demagogic character of these replies. My friends, the Prohibitionists, indulged in, but I looked in vain for a single argument which could change in the least my opinion.

Again he says:

"To demonstrate that the abstainers employ clearer methods of thinking than such sinful drinkers as would indulge in an interesting experiment, but from the Prohibitionist literature I cannot gain the impression that clearness of thinking is their particular strength.

Then he proceeds to elucidate why, in his mind, they do not think clearly, he says:

Typical of their tendencies is the way in which they draw arbitrarily consequences from single experiments. If, for instance, quite right to point out that associations and mental associations slower, but therefore it is not right to conclude from the complete crippling of our mental life, produced by alcohol, we can ask ourselves or not this retardation of associations of ideas is not perhaps in a healthy sense the useful relaxation of certain brain centers. With the same logic they could demonstrate to us that sheep in Australia are a invention of nature, as it produces a wonderful brain centers will not. They have not the slightest understanding for the fundamental fact that which the prohibition in certain parts of the brain brings to every single act of attention. They do not take the trouble to ask whether or not our associations become changed through the digestion of a dry meal.

Evils of Prohibition.

Concerning some of the specific evils of prohibition, as he views it, the professor says to his critics:

"Let us not forget that we want to make laws for a nation whose healthful temperament is the result of centuries, improved in the last years to be the ideal of the world. Let us not forget that we want to legislate against a psychological desire to which the majority of men. The absence of this desire in many women of a certain type of men whose nervous systems are differently organized can easily surprise us. Let us not personally, for instance, bringing up in a temperance home, consider this as a long a Americans remain Americans.

In painting for the millions I should feel reckless and irresponsible if I simply considered my own chance constitution.

I have no word against the so-called restriction of personal liberty. I do not know of any right to a personal liberty if it is offensive with the common good, but the more I understand that this common good is determined by the careful observation of the facts.

Then, passing on to the "common good," he declares: That kind of legislation which prevails in certain parts of the country and is evidently near to others is dangerous to the common good.

Industries Destroyed.

Then he declares industries and makes producers of thousands breathless and that the legislation is a much greater harm which it produces.

Then, pointing to the direct good which is to result from prohibition, he says: "Prohibition will not change human nature, but it will change the conditions of life. It will not change the desires of men, but it will change the objects which can satisfy these desires. It will not change the digestion of a dry meal.

Evils of Prohibition.

Concerning some of the specific evils of prohibition, as he views it, the professor says to his critics:

"Let us not forget that we want to make laws for a nation whose healthful temperament is the result of centuries, improved in the last years to be the ideal of the world. Let us not forget that we want to legislate against a psychological desire to which the majority of men. The absence of this desire in many women of a certain type of men whose nervous systems are differently organized can easily surprise us. Some Varying Opinions on Alcoholic Liquors

DR. CHARLES L. DANA, president of American Academy of Medicine—"Alcohol is always a food. The immediate removal of alcohol from social life would lead to social and racial decadence."

Dr. Williams of New York—"Alcohol always lessens the power for work. It is the greatest evil of society."

Professor Alexander F. Chamberlain of Clark University—"A nation cannot exist half-drunk and half-sober."

Professor Hugo Munsterberg of Harvard—"It must be a campaign of education toward a moderate use of light beverages."

Allen S. Watkins of Lynn, vice-presidential candidate on the Prohibition ticket—"Liquor is injurious, no matter in what quantities it is used."

CHAPTER XIV.

When a Woman's in Love

EMILE came to Anna early the next morning. She had been up all night, sitting and thinking, and Emile could not help but see that she had been crying.

"Anna, what is the matter?" he asked, as he took her hands in his.

Anna nodded acquiescence and, without speaking, and Emile could see that she was trying to control herself, she began to tell him all.

He threw his head up proudly, then unconsciously listened as he took a deep breath.

"I asked you to have forgiveness, to withhold judgment. You didn't believe me this afternoon. You couldn't, I suppose you didn't believe me without proof, but you didn't believe me without proof, because you knew I was innocent. You knew Duke was guilty. I can say to you no more than I have said before, that I did not love him."

He was holding her fingers waiting for her to speak, but she would not look up. Again he took up his plea.

"I want you to turn that, I want to feel that you love me. Have you forgiven me? Anna, look up with me."

With one sobbing cry that came straight from her heart she met the woman stepped back.

He sprang toward her.

"What is it? What's wrong?" he asked.

Anna put up her hand, motioning him back.

"Wait, wait just a moment," she pleaded. He stood staring at her in amazement while she fought for self-control. At last she raised her head.

"Mr. Temple!"

His eagerness warned her and she rushed on breathlessly.

"I am not the woman you think at all, Mr. Temple. I am not Miss Duke. I have been living under false pretenses. I am married. I am a married woman."

Shocked, amazed incredulous, Temple stepped back, staring at her.

"Yes, that's what I am," she cried, almost hysterically. "I am married. I have two children. I am—I am Robert Grainger's wife."

She stopped, and the two stood staring at each other. Horror, unspeakable horror was in Temple's face, while the woman's head dropped in utter shame.

"Robert Grainger's wife!" he gasped at last, incredulously.

"I know you hate me, don't look at me, don't speak to me, don't touch me, don't even stay in the room with me. I thought I could get it all, and I thought I could keep it all from you, but I couldn't. I couldn't, and I had to tell you. You must go now, you must leave me, you must never see me again. You must never speak to me, never look at me, never know me. Please go, please go, please go!" she cried, almost hysterically.

"I shall not go until you have heard me out," he said, firmly. "You were speaking of your children. Are they mine?"

"Yes, yes, they are yours, they are yours, they are yours!" she cried, wildly. "I am married to Robert Grainger, but they are yours. Now you must go, you must go!"

"I shall not go until you have heard me out," he said, firmly. "You were speaking of your children and the name you gave them. Is it Duke?"

"No, no, it is not Duke. It is the name I gave them to shield them from the disgrace of their birth. It is Anna's awful confession to the world."

Anna's Awful Confession

Robert Grainger's head was bowed with bitter shame, but he raised it now and looked at her. She could not meet his gaze, and she did, for after a few voice sharp and unnecessarily harsh.

"I have not heard that story. I thought you knew it. I thought you knew it when you came to me. I thought you knew it when you asked me to marry you. I thought you knew it when you asked me to take you from Robert Grainger's home. I thought you knew it when you asked me to—"

"I thought you knew it when you asked me to—"

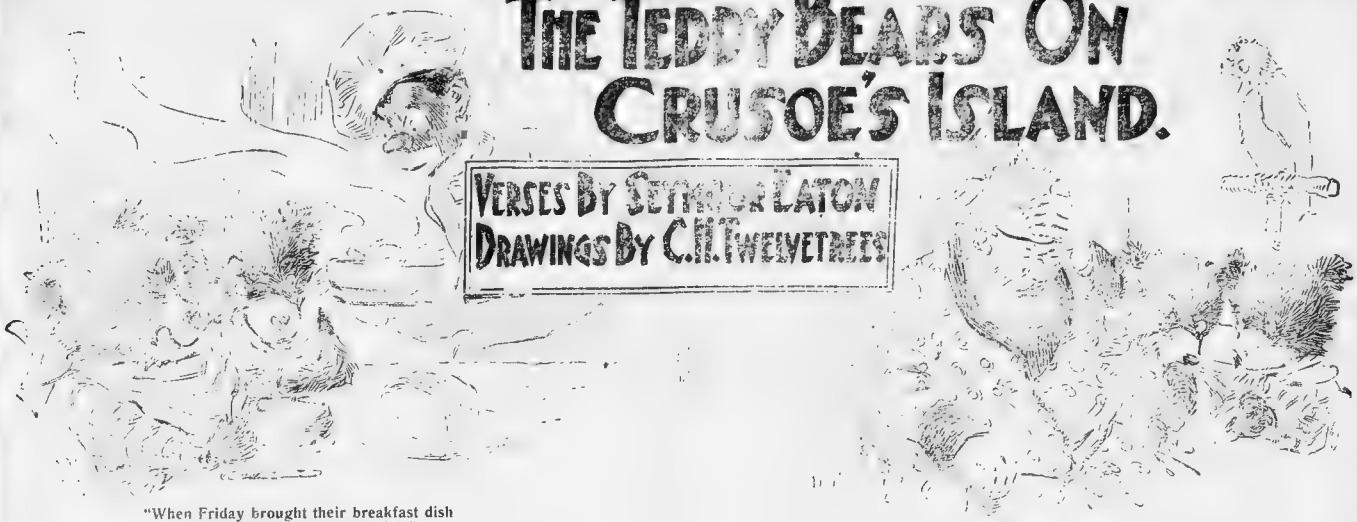
THE TEDDY BEARS ON CRUSOE'S ISLAND.

VERSES BY SETH HOYT LATON
DRAWINGS BY C. H. TWELVETREES



"When Friday brought their breakfast dish
Of barley porridge and tea and fish."

"TOO tired to-day for work or play,"
The Teddy Bears heard Crusoe say,
When Friday brought their breakfast dish
Of barley porridge and tea and fish.
"That scare I had last night," said he,
"When that monster shark
chased TEDDY-G, Upset my sleep last night a bit
And tired me out, I must admit."
But TEDDY-G just laughed and said That Hungry shark must needs be fed Crusoe replied that he didn't care
To feed a shark with a
Teddy Bear.
"And I propose right now," said he,
"That you have this day entirely free
To go around from place to place,
To explore nut or monkeys
chase,
To fish for trout in lonesome creeks,
Just as you like till supper time.
And I'll stay home and read and rest,
And then cook supper, my very best."
Then off they went, the polar pair,
Each with a knapsack on his hip
Packed by Friday for the trip,
And on each shoulder a little gun,
And broad-brimmed hats to keep off the sun.
They followed a path for a mile or more

They Followed A Path for a Mile or More, Right Up the Mountain From the Shore.

Right up the mountain from the shore,
Stopping at times some fruit to pick
And once to watch a monkey's trick,
How he swung across from tree to tree

"I got my sleep last night a bit,
And tired me out, I must admit."

Carrying in her arms her family
They found a great big nest of wasps,
And in it an end and screeched
And as they looked they heard a cry

As this, they said, is a small matter
And TEDDY-G, to have some fun
Just aimed one shot from his little gun,
And sent the bullet through the nest,
Then hornets arrived from east and west,
And north and south, and everywhere,
And each one made for a
Teddy Bear
They beat them off with hat and paw,
The biggest hornets ever saw,
And the wildest too, but the hornets won.
For the Teddy Bears had to turn and run,
And this is how the bears
that day
Got off the path and out their way
And rambled about for an hour or more Till they came out close by the shore
Where around a fire, built on the sand,
They saw nine men, a savage band.

They Beat Them Off With Hat and Paw, the Biggest Hornets They Ever Saw.

And two big birds came flying by,
And screeched so loud and looked so strong
That the Teddy Bears just walked along.

"Don't move a step," said TEDDY-B,
"Let us climb this friendly tree
Where we'll be safe from
And Where

"And screeched so loud and looked so strong
That the Teddy Bears just walked along."

"Where around a fire, built on the sand,
They saw nine men, a savage band."

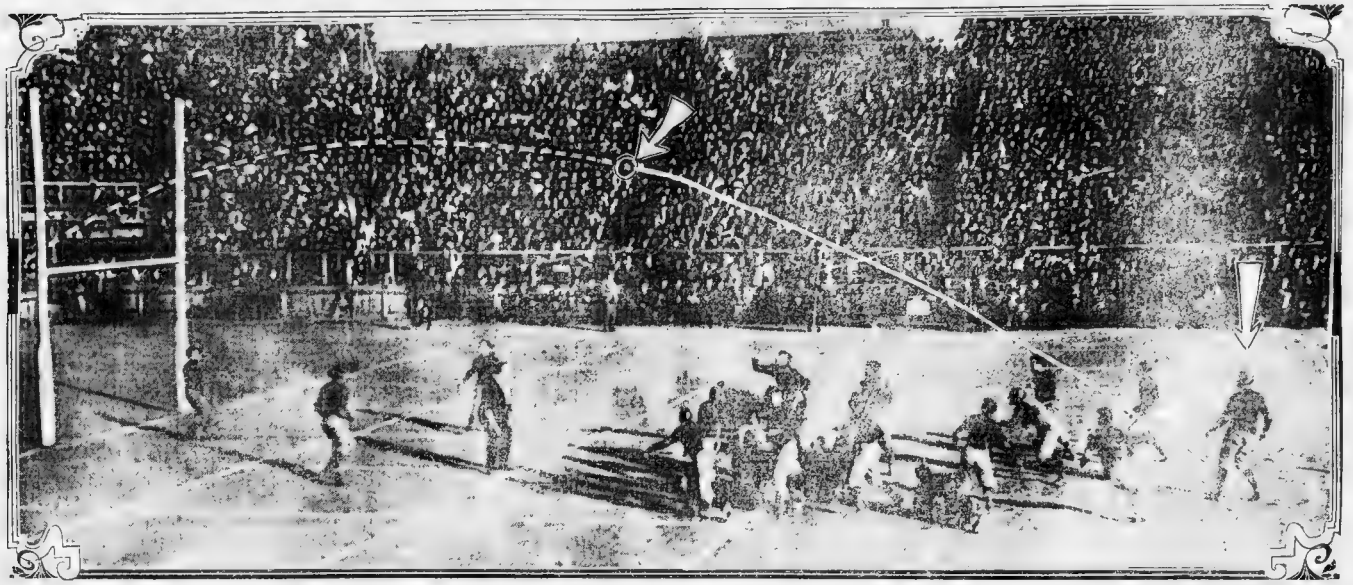
HARVARD DEFEATS YALE, 4 TO 0, BY GREAT GENERALSHIP

KENNARD GOES IN AND KICKS GOAL ON HIS FIRST PLAY



WHEELWRIGHT of Brookline, leaping high to stop the goal that won the game for Harvard. This remarkable photograph was taken by a Boston American staff photographer at the Yale-Harvard game yesterday afternoon. It shows the ball in the air between Kennard and the goal posts, through which the ball sailed a second or two later. An arrow points to Wheelwright, who is seen watching the ball in its flight. Another arrow shows Coy, the Yale player, "blocking" the Harvard players protected their kicker is vividly shown in the photograph.

BRILLIANT MOVE WHEN KENNARD IS CALLED IN

Coy Plays Wonderful Football, and Proves Himself the Whole Yale Team.

BY DYKE CLARK.

New Haven, Nov. 21. After watching Yeomen Harvard came into her own [illegible] Yale when it was [illegible] Harvard gridiron history.

[illegible] Four Points Enough.

[illegible] Secret of Yale's Defeat.

[illegible] Oh, So Easy!

In a desperate struggle each team [illegible] Haughton had called for the Yale [illegible] to defeat the Blue. What was needed most as the psychological moment was a good kicker, and Kennard was the lad for the job. He never flinched but trotted out on the field prepared to save the game for Harvard. One of the thousands in the stands imagined he would succeed, coming into the game at such an important stage of the battle.

The Harvard man formed for a drop kick goal from the [illegible] yard line. The ball was passed to him [illegible] and perfect work, but it was [illegible] of such a powerful machine as [illegible] Coy put on the gridiron. Kennard [illegible] a drop kick was a stroke of genius.

WHAT EXPERTS SAY ABOUT THE GAME.

Capt. F. H. Burr, Harvard:

I have nothing to say. The game speaks for itself.

Harry Kersburg, Harvard Coach:

I never saw a better game. Yale was outplayed. The [illegible] Harvard won.

Charlie Daly, Harvard Coach:

Why waste words. We won as I expected. It will long be remembered as one of the greatest battles in gridiron history.

Sprague, Harvard Half Back:

It was the [illegible] Yale was disorganized and we clearly outplayed her. Harvard was a machine. Yale was Coy and ten men.

Sam Hoar, Harvard Guard:

The second one we had at the beginning of the game was [illegible] sufficient for our victory.

McKay, Harvard Tackle:

Coy deserves great credit, but Yale needed more men [illegible]

Crowley, Harvard End:

[illegible] were worthy of their reputation, but there was [illegible] no team work. Individual brilliancy could not [illegible] of Harvard machine.

Withington, Harvard Guard:

The Yale team were worthy competitors, but they lacked team work and a leader.

John Mack, Yale Trainer:

Yale came through without a scratch. Not a man was hurt or even worn out. The game was one of the cleanest ever played.

"Pooch" Donovan, Harvard's Trainer:

I was confident that the Harvard [illegible] would win. In fact, I almost entirely upon [illegible] Harvard and its players. Coy deserves great credit for his good work, but it was [illegible] of such a powerful machine as [illegible] Coy put on the gridiron. Kennard [illegible] a drop kick was a stroke of genius.

L. H. Bigelow, Yale's Head Coach:

Harvard is entitled to full credit for her victory over Yale. Her team played better and deserved all it got. I will say that I regard the decision of the referee in regard to the forward pass, about which there has been some discussion, as fully correct. It was the only decision to give. Yale was defeated by one of the best teams which ever represented Harvard. Yale played hard and fast, but was outplayed.

Captain R. P. Burch, Yale:

I have no comments to make. Yale played a hard game all through, but I want to give Harvard credit for having a fast team.

Roraback, Yale Coach:

The Yale rush line cannot be given too much praise. It was one of the best Yale ever had. Nourse, of Harvard, who has been showing fine form all season, was fairly outplayed by Biddle.

Carl Flanders, Yale Coach:

Lost opportunities tells the story of to-day's game. Yale's rush line work was first class and the play of Hinds and Goebel was conspicuous.

"Billy" Garcelon, Harvard:

Harvard's victory was due to the sound sense and executive ability of Coach Haughton. Hard work and attention to details has counted. Charlie Daly certainly did wonderfully well in taking a green quarter and developing him in the way he has Cutler. Harvard has caught a new spirit of fight which is destined to shatter Yale's prestige on the gridiron.

at closer range than Harvard had when Kennard put his over. But they decided to try to win the game—not to tie it.

The play resorted to was a forward pass. It was mostly done out Harvard's magnificent defensive applied. The foundation rose to the Harvard line and a Crimson gained such in the period of Cutler fell on it. The next moment the ball was kicked out of danger.

Again Yale Buckles Down.

Again Yale buckled down. The blue warriors were sent through the line in solid formation for curbing the leathern-covered pigskin. Save gains. No free Harvard men seemed able to check his mighty attack. Twenty-two yards from the line Coy forward pass was tried. The ball was got through but the ball again fell to the ground, for no legal catch was made. Later Kennard tried a drop kick, but it was wide to Harvard.

The Crimson at this had worked every trick in the Harvard repertoire to stop the onslaught of the Blue. Every time the ball was put in play the Harvard line had to be strengthened to withstand the terrific attack of the Yale backfield. Time and again the Crimson warriors had been forced back to their goal line, but they had always braced and held for downs.

The failure of this play changed the entire aspect of the game. Harvard felt the tension. Harvard's supporters, who had been silent for a time, for the first time in the game went up into a frenzy of cheers and shouts. The situation was tense and the excitement could not be suppressed. It was the chance of the game. Harvard seemed to have the ball right where it could do the most good. Yale's defense was not due to long weakness, but to inability to overcome the Harvard defense by the successful execution of "new football."

Captain Burr on Sidelines.

Captain Burr of Harvard did not take part in the game, the coaches refusing to allow him to take a chance with the injured shoulder. He saw the game from the sidelines in company with Head Coach Haughton.

Glorious Day for the Game.

It was a splendid day. The sun shone bright and warm and not before the cold had begun hands of the multitude of spectators began to lay aside their coats. There was just breeze from the south, but not enough to count. The sunlight was the finest element with which to test football figures had to contend. It shone directly into the eyes of those defending the north goal.

New Haven was jammed with visitors. They were on the sidewalks and over the streets. Scores of trains from all parts had poured their loads of humanity into the city during the morning hours. It was estimated that fifty thousand people were in the city.

Every hotel was crowded for days before the game. Those who thought they would enjoy the game by coming to New Haven last night found the most of them returned to their homes in disgust. Every hotel was crowded to the doors last night and early this morning. Many people had to go to private houses for lodgings. Women, for the most part, were the ones who were compelled to go to the homes of friends.

Great Work by White and Corbett.

It was White's and Corbett's spectacular dashes through the ends, aided by dashing play in the Harvard line, that gave Kennard the opportunity to score the goal that won the game. Time and again through the line, and around the end, Yale's backfield men carried the ball for gains. Time and again the Harvard line was strengthened to withstand the onslaught of the Yale backfield men. Time and again Harvard's ends were forced back to their goal line, but they always braced and held for downs.

Yale's team offense was remarkable, rather than the defense, as the defensive work of Harvard seemed at times more individuals who could do their part on them at the right time. Harvard was aware there at the critical moments Yale's defeat was not due to team weakness, but to inability to overcome the Harvard defense by the successful execution of "new football."

game. The odds fluctuated First Harvard was choice, then Yale. Bets 2 was principally governed by the amount of the pool. The place where the most was made. The last 24 hours odds were made it an even contest and so it was.

Thousands of dollars were wagered in the last few hours before the game. Hundreds more were bet on the field itself. All set to the end this was continued the chance seemed to be divided. Not until the referee's whistle blew was the contest settled. Yale was away on the verge of tying the score; hovering just on the brink of beating he four points. Harvard did stretch up in that short first half dash. Forty thousand people were excited, in anxious suspense, until the crowning climax almost exhausted were cold from the field.

The March to the Field.

The pilgrimage to Yale field began early. When the gates were opened the grounds were surrounded by a waiting crowd of humanity. Later it was difficult only to get into the field, but to get out. The single street that led directly to the field two miles from Yale campus was packed from sidewalk to sidewalk and from end to end, with all the elements of humanity, all moving in the same direction, much needed a guard to keep order. Many were struck by the trolley cars were filled to their last inch, and in some cases even women and children, clung to the running boards. Hundreds of students cycled to the field, some of them spilling of into the road when the roads became too crowded. The avenues by which the immense throng of traffic was diverted, was a seething mass of processions of motor cars, many of which had come to New Haven from as far as Boston and New York—cars even from Pittsburg and Chicago. This procession was always from two to three miles long, and no room between cars. It was a spectacular show in itself.

A Riot of Color.

The crowds were a riot of color. Blue and Crimson dotted the stream of people, to be divided into two great single-lined multitudes on the ground, the Blue at the East and the Crimson at the West. The women wore many blue or red costumes, and color scheming was carried out in their hats, many of which were extremely expensive and stylish. They carried pennants flags, or wore hats or Harvard bands from their sleeves or on their hats.

Hundreds of vendors lined the way from the last car centre to the gates of Yale Field, with all sorts of novelties with which to make a demonstration—either for Yale or Harvard.

There is no method of land transportation in vogue in New Haven so popular as the trolley car. With board sets and seats for four horses, in fine weather, are carried to the game for 50 cents.

The largest single grandstand ever filled when the thirty five Harvard men, led by Lefty Daniels, accompanied by the Harvard band, accompanied by nearly onethird from thousands of loyal sons, swung into line and marched to the field. A wave of flags and a flood of Crimson swept over the west stand as the colors were produced.

Yale Team Appears.

Yale followed a few minutes later, and there was another and equally strenuous tumult. The Yale band responded to the Harvard cheer, while the east stand became a sea of blue, emerging away over into the north stand, where the Yale overflow went stand as the colors were produced.

Yale put a quick quietus to the Harvard enthusiasm by forcing Lee ball all-out to the Crimson goal line by a series of over attacking, old fashioned line rushes to the accompaniment of a constant succession of the Yale "Bingo-eo-ki-yi-yi-o-o." This advance was not checked until the ball was in fifteen-yard line and not before Yale had made a first down. Then Harvard's spirits had fallen to the last inch.

They came the sensational open and close rushes of Harvard's back, that resulted in victory, and there was a storm of cheers from the west stand that drowned out the Yale encouraging demonstration on the east side.

During the entire second half, while Yale was straining as Yale never struggled before to overcome that lead, so put from which, yet not to be overcome, in the first half of the game, Harvard's backfield men by their team to keep the ball in their own territory, and Yale's backfield men by their team to get it into Harvard territory.

Cheermasters Work Overtime.

Eyes were strained, the efforts of the cheermasters were frequently unavailing. The most of the spectators were too absorbed to shout—Harvard was too scared, Yale was too eager.

Throughout the most of that battle the ball was tonight over in Harvard's territory, and there was relief in thousands of Harvard hearts when the weirdly low and the Crimson stands emptied into the field for the inevitable celebration—the first Harvard has had since 1901.

ning just the Harvard spring in the shape of a field goal to decide the contest.

Philbin's Sensational Run.

Philbin, the Yale halfback, made one sensational run when he received the kick-off at the beginning of the second half and sprinted to midfield.

Yale showed the most consistency in making headway, using the old method of rushing through the line with its power of heavy artillery. Ends of the line, but Harvard was a set to size it up successfully before one plunge was made.

The end men on both teams were about on a par. Yale made fair catches on all kicks when it was possible and got away down the field with good speed in many instances. But the crimson ends helped to spoil all fair kicks and end runs, which Yale tried time and again, found a new method of progress but Yale coaches resorted to.

It mobbed like a fine victory at the outset as Yale received the ball by the kick-off and Coy made a run from a fake kick formation that failed to gain an inch. Then Yale, driven to desperation, made a try for goal, but Wheaton's attempt was blocked and Harvard secured the ball on downs on its own 20 yard line.

Crimsons' Sigh of Relief.

The sudden turn of battle caused a sigh of relief to escape from the Harvard stands. White then was given another chance over the Blue ends. A few plays and again Yale was crashing through the Harvard line in a mad attempt to cross the goal line.

On and on they went, Coy keeping up his fame as a wonderful line bucker. It was most continuous, slamming through the centre of the line. Harvard played game and held Yale in the shadow of her goal and took the ball away on downs.

Again were the Crimson supporters in high glee, as Yale had been held for a second time. Then Harvard unfurled some of her fighting attack when Corbett and White tore at left end, hitting off 20 yards on the first successful rush of the contest. It was the signal for pandemonium to start up in the Harvard stands.

A penalty for offside play did not effect Harvard, because in four rushes the ball was carried over the middle line and dropped in Yale's territory. A further penalty for holding, however, was a set-back to Harvard as it carried the ball back on first 45 yard line, but Corbett, by a clever run around left end on a fake kick formation, placed the pigskin safely in midfield. An onside kick gave Yale possession of the ball, but she was obliged to punt failing to gain by rushing.

Harvard Under Way Again.

A fair catch by Cutler on his 35 yard line got the Harvard attack under way again. On this first rush White got ten yards, but half of it was lost by an offside play. Corbett and Daly carried the ball to an outright position by digging through a hole in the left side of the line and with Lamar acting as interferer got 15 yards. Harvard began rushing fiercely for a first down, but some player's hand deflected the ball and it hit the ground in an open space, going to Yale where the play started.

Yale did not wait to rush, but Coy booted for 25 yards. Harvard fumbling but retaining the ball. Then began the victorious march. Corbett distinguished himself by circling left end and placing the ball in midfield. Hart was a gain-getter, but it was only a few in the game. A couple of irresistible rushes at the Crimson right end carried the ball to Harvard's 40 yard line. Corbett came in front with a 20 yard dash through right tackle which put Harvard on Yale's thirty-yard line. Another left end run followed by White in the same place, got the ball to Yale's goal by six yards. Harvard was repulsed an in fant, in while got the yards through Hollis was thrown down with about five yards to go. Then came a pause for a minute as the players were pretty well used up. Yale was going to keep the ball and Harvard was to see it up as powerful before one plunge was made.

The end men on both teams were about on a par. Yale made fair catches on all kicks when it was possible and got away down the field with good speed in many instances. But the crimson ends helped to spoil all fair kicks and end runs, which Yale tried time and again, found a new method of progress but Yale coaches resorted to.

It mobbed like a fine victory at the outset as Yale received the ball by the kick-off and Coy made a run from a fake kick formation that failed to gain an inch. Then Yale, driven to desperation, made a try for goal, but Wheaton's attempt was blocked and Harvard secured the ball on downs on its own 20 yard line.

Crimsons' Sigh of Relief.

The sudden turn of battle caused a sigh of relief to escape from the Harvard stands. White then was given another chance over the Blue ends. A few plays and again Yale was crashing through the Harvard line in a mad attempt to cross the goal line.

On and on they went, Coy keeping up his fame as a wonderful line bucker. It was most continuous, slamming through the centre of the line. Harvard played game and held Yale in the shadow of her goal and took the ball away on downs.

Again were the Crimson supporters in high glee, as Yale had been held for a second time. Then Harvard unfurled some of her fighting attack when Corbett and White tore at left end, hitting off 20 yards on the first successful rush of the contest. It was the signal for pandemonium to start up in the Harvard stands.

A penalty for offside play did not effect Harvard, because in four rushes the ball was carried over the middle line and dropped in Yale's territory. A further penalty for holding, however, was a set-back to Harvard as it carried the ball back on first 45 yard line, but Corbett, by a clever run around left end on a fake kick formation, placed the pigskin safely in midfield. An onside kick gave Yale possession of the ball, but she was obliged to punt failing to gain by rushing.

Harvard Under Way Again.

A fair catch by Cutler on his 35 yard line got the Harvard attack under way again. On this first rush White got ten yards, but half of it was lost by an offside play. Corbett and Daly carried the ball to an outright position by digging through a hole in the left side of the line and with Lamar acting as interferer got 15 yards. Harvard began rushing fiercely for a first down, but some player's hand deflected the ball and it hit the ground in an open space, going to Yale where the play started.

Yale did not wait to rush, but Coy booted for 25 yards. Harvard fumbling but retaining the ball. Then began the victorious march. Corbett distinguished Coy tearing through Harvard's line soon after the kick off. The Elis carried the ball to Harvard's twenty-yard line, but ere they lost it.

CORNELL IS FIRST IN CROSS COUNTRY

Syracuse Is Second and Harvard Third in Intercollegiate Champ at Princeton.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 21.—Young of Cornell won the intercollegiate cross-country run here this afternoon in 34 minutes 14 seconds. Hull of Michigan was second in 34 19⅘; Jacques third, 34 30. The Cornell team showed surprising strength, capturing second place all through the race. Syracuse got second place and Harvard third. At the end of the first round, Howland of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who was running in exhibition race, was leading with Young second and Jacques, Harvard, third.

The number of points scored by teams: Cornell, 30; Syracuse, 87; Harvard, 80; Yale, 96; Michigan, 105; Princeton, 134; Pennsylvania, 158.

In the order at the finish, following Young were Hull of Michigan; Jacques (H.), Lapier, Cornell; Hall, Cornell; Regan, Cornell; Brown, Cornell; Copeland, M. I. T.; Tower, Michigan; Horsfall, Syracuse; Litchner, Yale; Bogert, Cornell; and Harvard had the ball on its at 12 yard line.

Sprague Replaces Corbett.

Sprague went in for Corbett at the second and did the punting. He booted to Coy on Harvard's 45 yard line, and it being to look dubious for the crimson, with he asserted Yale power position to add once. An onside kick by Philbin was recovered by Hobbs of Yale on Harvard's 45 yard line.

Here Yale uncovered a forward pass, Johnson, who had replaced Sprague at quarterback, making the throw, but the forward pass went over the plays, and the ball hit the ground, rolling outside at the corner of the field. It was a 5 yard foul for the Harvard goal, with both teams in punt.

Crimson Out of Danger.

The ball was brought out and Harvard lined up, standing on its own goal line Sprague booted the ball out of danger, rising the ball to the north end of the field. Coy being the man around which they gathered to form the Harvard defense.

He kicked goose for ten yards and a half more, coming toward Harvard's goal, it was third down for Yale inside the 25 yard line with four to go, and Yale stopped momentarily, surely pressed for the distance to make.

The formation for a field goal was made, Johnson going back to hold the ball for Coy, the ends fell down, and quick as a flash Coy picked it up and passed to Philbin, who caught it on Harvard's 30 yard line. There was consternation in the Harvard ranks, for it meant a touchdown if Philbin got away at all, such was his dashing fight. The referee got busy and recalled the ball, as the pass was illegal, not going five yards outside the centre of the field, as the rules specify, and Harvard recovered the ball on its 25 yard line, much to the enjoyment of the Crimson rooters.

Ellis' Last Gasp.

It was the last gasp of the one-man team which got away with Princeton, but which found the Crimson knowing a little too much football. Yale still kept doggedly

BROKEN RIB DIDN'T STOP AMHERST MAN PLAYING

Captain Kilbourn Wouldn't Leave, and His Team Finally Beats Williams.

Amherst, Mass., Nov. 21.—Amherst recorded in making a first down till the ball had been pushed five times.

Williams tried a forward pass, but Amherst's swift quarterback, caught the ball. The home team, however, were penalized for offside play and forced to punt again. Captain Kilbourn ran up with the ball and made a brilliant tackle, but fell in such a way as to break a rib. He would not give in, however, and fought through to the end of the game.

Coy threw more punts had been exchanged Williams again tried a forward pass, and later, catching the ball, carried it to their 20 yard line. Here Amherst was forced to punt, but the play was called and the ownership of the ball given to Williams 30 yard line.

Meehlen then kicked a field goal, making the only score of the game. Summary:

over for Waltham High yesterday afternoon when the Watch City eleven ran up 21 points and held the Everett team to no score.

From the opening rush Waltham proved itself the superior team and throughout the game outplayed nearly and sometimes completely the Everett aggregation. While Everett's speed was only reasonable

For a short time in both halves Brickley, Everett's star halfback, showed a flash of form that proved himself a whirlwind on both offense and defense. The Waltham line repeatedly broke through Everett's defense and nailed the runners for losses. Waltham's ends were often down the field under punts before the runner was reached. Time after time Everett was forced to punt on second down because of the ease with which Waltham broke through the line and nailed the runner for losses.

Easy for Waltham.

Waltham showed itself to be the strongest of the two teams and was able to make the first down almost at will. Every player in the Waltham line played a fine game, and Captain Locke, Loomis and Allen starred in the backfield. Locke showed himself a good leader and a fine all-round player. Loomis was the star of the game, and his line bucking was a feature. Allen showed himself a fine punter and a good man in the backfield. Donahue, quarterback for Waltham, played a good game, and his generalship was of a high order. Davis, left half back, played a fine game, and his line bucking was a feature. Davis, right half back, played a good game, and his line bucking was a feature. Barrows, left end, played a fine game, and his line bucking was a feature.

Worked Trick Plays.

Forward passes and onside kicks proved a feature of the game. Waltham worked the latter play several times with success, and Everett tried the former repeatedly, but with poor success. Waltham's ends were down the field under punts before the runner was reached. Time after time Everett was forced to punt on second down because of the ease with which Waltham broke through the line and nailed the runner for losses. DARING MOTOR DRIVERS READY FOR RECORD RACES ON THE SAVANNAH COURSE THIS WEEK

MOST FAMOUS DRIVERS NOW ON SOUTHERN COURSE.

Militia Will Be on Guard to Keep the Track Clear and Prevent Accidents.

By J. C. KERRISON.

The interest in the forthcoming races at Savannah transcends in importance any other topic of conversation in the automobile trade. The events themselves promise to be the greatest contests that ever have been held on this continent, and to rival in the matter of international reputation even the far-famed Gordon Bennett contests which for so many years kept all Europe by the ears and in which there were few American entrants.

In the Grand Prix race cars are merely contestants entered, there are counting four different competitors, the same engineering what is perhaps the best detail of motor and drivers that is ever placed at a starter to the world. Men who owned the world over for their daring and taste have come to these shores to show that they are the speed of the future to be the greatest and fastest cars ever tested. It being freely predicted that records will be lowered in the 40 mile race, the impression being that everything depends on your will be attained. That is partly true, but in five events the 40 mile faster than was recorded in the races, and the engineers say that this speed will not exceed cars are driven over.

World's Famous Drivers.

The drivers of the cars come from all sections of the world and the rivalry promises to be one of the most interesting to see. Many well known drivers will drive cars representing the land of their birth.

The United States has entered the lists with the pick of the country, and Barney Oldfield, Lewis Strang and Joe Tracy are to be the drivers. Strang and Joe Tracy are to be the drivers. Strang and Joe Tracy are to be the drivers. Strang and Joe Tracy are to be the drivers.

TRADERS FAIL TO FRIGHTEN PUBLIC

Professionals Balked in Week's Campaign to Drive Out Timid Stock Buyers.

SHORT OUTSTANDING BIG

Raid on Tennessee Copper Causes Sensational Break of 8½ Points.

By Thomas C. Shotwell.

New York, Nov 21 - Professional traders have been busy the entire week trying to scare the public away from the stock market. Next [illegible] period to scare [illegible] into taking profits on the great bulk of profit investors remains unmoved. The bonds have not declined into a 2½ and the short outstanding in general [illegible] is rather large. "I'M LIVELIEST CORPSE THAT MR. HIBBARD EVER SAW."

—EX-MAYOR FITZGERALD

"I'll Show Mayor H For a Dead One, If He Run Against Me Next Fall," Says John F.

"HIBBARD ALL AT SEA"

Things are doing in Boston's political arena, despite the fact that this is "off year" in municipal politics. Mayor with mayoralty booms some for themselves, others for their friends, or copying the centre of the limelight, although Boston's next Mayor will not be chosen for more than a year.

The trouble started when Mayor George A. Hibbard made this triple announcement:

"I will not be a candidate for re-election.

"Finance Commissioner John A. Sullivan would make an ideal mayoralty candidate.

"Ex-Mayor John F. Fitzgerald is a political dead issue."

Finance Commissioner Sullivan and Ex-Mayor Fitzgerald the latter a Democrat and in Mayor Hibbard's mind, were the first to "announce themselves."

"Not a Candidate," Says Sullivan.

"I am not a candidate for the mayoralty nomination," said Mr. Sullivan, "and I wouldn't take it if it were offered to me.

"If Mayor Hibbard decides to run against me next fall, I will convince him that I am the liveliest corpse he ever saw, said ex-Mayor Fitzgerald.

With the discussion over the Hibbard Sullivan-Fitzgerald statements last night were many mutterings about "J. Mitchell Galvin for the Republican nomination for Mayor." "Joseph H. O'Neil, William Gaston or John A. Keliher for the Democratic nomination. Mayor [illegible] or James J. Storrow as a candidate. "Thomas A. Mackin is a candidate, you know" and more of the same sort of possible position of the finished [illegible] in speaking with respect to the several candidates was also discussed.

Ex-Mayor Fitzgerald's reply to Hibbard's statement that he is a political "dead one" is one of the [illegible] annals in the history of Boston politics.

"Mayor Hibbard, who is running mad through the country declaring that I am dead and buried politically, does not know when he is dead," says the ex-Mayor. "Were the courage to display in politics with me or anyone else in Boston who he considered a dead issue politically and for that reason announced that he was not in the field, he would have the courage to leave the city to deliver another address.

"The Mayor's statement that I am a 'dead one' is the best compliment that he can pay me, but if he will only come to run against me next Fall I will convince him that he will be about the liveliest corpse he ever saw.

"Hibbard Disappointment."

"Time and again since Mayor Hibbard has been at the head of the city I have tried every possible means of digging up publicity in the affairs of the city and placing him that hundreds of persons throughout the city, including many of those who aided him in his election, feel that he is distinctly not up to his present position and that he and his advisers know less about conducting the affairs of an executive standpoint than many who have never seen the inside of City Hall.

"Mayor Hibbard has succeeded in disappointing practically everybody of prominence who was with him for mayor a year ago, and his entrance into politics is gradually growing so small that he will be obliged to confide in a few outside newspapermen before the close of the first year of his term.

"If Mayor would only discuss upon a public platform in Boston some of the topics he presents in New York and every other city he visits, he would soon learn that his expressions of opinion would be challenged by those who know better. But he mayor lacks the courage to meet the people of the city to discuss some of the ideas which crop out from time to time through the aid of his secretaries."

CONFESSED FORGER'S WIFE SEEKS WORK

Chicago, Nov. 21.—Mrs. Peter Van Vlissengen, wife of the confessed forger of worthless mortgages, who pleaded guilty and was sent to the penitentiary for one day, seeking employment from her former associates. A young woman was the stenographer before she married Van Vlissengen, who stood foremost among the real estate brokers of the town.

"Smiling Jim" Donovan, Boston's New Boss, Smiles and Smiles, and —

"Smiling Jim" Donovan, Boss on's new Democratic leader. Photograph especially posed for Boston Sunday American.

With Right Candidate Democrats of Boston Can Elect Next Mayor, He Says.

James Donovan, hailed by his followers as the leader of the Democracy of Boston, sat in his home at No. 74 Emerald street, South End, last night and talked about himself, his party and what it was likely to accomplish in the next mayoralty fight.

His home is a two-story wooden build ing and not at all ornate in exterior, or luxurious inside. It is simply and tastefully furnished and gives something of an insight into the character of the owner

Donovan has lived all his life in the neighborhood. He was born within a furlong of his house and used to carry bundles on his arm around the neighborhood when he began getting a living as a "storekeeper." All around are tenement houses 3-7 called in the neighborhood—and there are a myriad schools. Wells, Dinan, Shaw, Dwight, Tyler and Lincoln—in which they meet the former Napoleon of Streets and the man who as head of the ward and city committees led the fights which elected Josiah Quincy Mayor after the party had lost one mayoralty battle under another election, and resulted in the performance in behalf of the late Patrick A. Collins

"Voters Won't Stand for Boss."

"What are you going to do as Democratic boss?" he was asked.

"I'm not the Democratic boss," replied Donovan. "I don't want to be boss and I can not be if I wanted to. The people of Boston won't stand for not be one. You will look over the city now and review past performances you will see what has happened to those who have been the boss. You see, the average citizen takes a pretty acute interest in politics and is pretty well informed. Any man who tries to drive Boston voters like a herd

"HOT RULE SPIRIT IS TOO STRONG FOR BOSSES IN HUB," SAYS DONOVAN.

"Boston voters cannot be driven like a herd.

"Fight it out in the primaries and then have party harmony.

Boston Democrats will nominate a mayoralty candidate they can elect.

"The organization ought to represent the wishes of the voters.

"The home rule spirit is too strong in Boston wards to permit any boss rule in the city Democracy."

-James Donovan, leader of the Democratic party.

THE spirit of that other Vanderbilt who gained immortality by his famous utterance of "the public be damned" seems to survive in the management of the Boston Elevated. Edict Calling for Beheading of Plotters in Interior.

Special Cable to Boston American.

PEKIN, Nov 21—Relying upon the backing of the representatives of foreign concessionaries, Prince Chun has consummated what is practically a coup d'etat, placing himself on the throne so far as authority goes, although he retains the title of Regent.

While the assumption of control will mean the execution of hundreds and maybe thousands, it is regarded here as a step toward constitutional government and progress. Further it means an open China. There are enormous natural resources in the interior, which are expected to be opened to the foreign interests in return for their support in his usurpation of authority.

For more than a week the attitude of the Regent and the Dowager Empress has been a perplexing problem. Their every action was shrouded with the greatest secrecy. Rumors were current that the Regent had been deposed, that the Empress had been killed, that the Regent had committed suicide, that the Empress had committed suicide, that the Regent had been killed, that the Empress had been killed, that the Regent had been killed, that the Empress had been killed, that the Regent had been killed, that the Empress had been killed

Buy Your Liquors —WITH— Your Eyes Open

Remember that the United States Government has passed a pure food law, and that the section relating to liquors operates to protect the people of this country against impure whiskies. This pure food law (one of the best laws ever passed for the people) compels sellers of all kinds of liquors to state plainly upon the package just what they are selling or be PROSECUTED in the Federal courts. ☞ Read the labels on the whiskey you are now using, and if marked Blended or Compound it is not pure, straight whiskey.

Don't Drink Adulterated Whiskey

says so in a characteristically caustic but entertaining article on eating, entitled in December COSMOPOLITAN MAGAZINE. This article is preceded by a short introductory note on Bletcherism, by Horace Fletcher himself, the great authority on the thorough chewing of food.

"The Gentle Art of Fletcherizing"

"Taste your food." This is Horace Fletcher's battle cry. He "believes that through the disuse of our sense of taste we have acquired abnormal appetites, vicious desires, false tastes, and that the only way to get back to nature is to chew, masticate, munch everything we eat"—to chew until there isn't any taste left, not as a task, but in order to get the most out of a normal enjoyment.

"Most people," says Hubbard, "are human sewers, and carry with them constantly decaying masses of refuse through bolting their food. "The real wonder is that they live at all."

A very timely and stimulating article, in Hubbard's best vein.

This Is What We Came From

JOHN INNES.

To Appreciate the Present, We Must Occasionally Look Into the Past, and Comfort Ourselves with the Distance Travelled.

VERY striking picture illustrates this page. We cannot help looking at it, we cannot turn from it without thought. A primitive man, relatively feeble, and a savage beast, limitless in ferocity and overwhelming in power. The naked man, armed only with a THOUGHT, that thought transformed into a bow and arrow, has conquered the animal and laid him flat and dying upon the earth in which dominion was destined to pass from the brute to man.

There are many thoughts in this picture. It was a desolate world when this was all that there was of human life, and it was not so long ago, in the life of a planet.

We believe the picture will interest our readers chiefly because it impresses upon them the wonderful progress that men have made. We have much to discourage us, with the poverty, the selfishness, the brutality that we see around us. If we believed that the world were always to remain as it is, misery to continue, useless poverty and anxiety to overwhelm a majority of us, we should unite in calling upon a kind Providence to annihilate our earth and end a dreadful fate.

But in such pictures as this, in knowledge however slight the progress that men have made, there is unlimited hope of the future, and there is, especially, a rebuke for the faint-hearted man who gives up instead of struggling on, believing in man's great destiny and determined to do what little he can to help achieve it.

Readers, think what the world was in its babyhood, when a picture like this told the whole story of man and of the earth.

Think of the wonderful progress. There wasn't a house on this earth's surface, not a road—only paths marked out by the bigger animals on their way from the upland to the water. There wasn't a tilled field. Forests, marshes, jungles ruled and struggled against the great wild beasts. And man—more beast than human, big-jawed, red-haired, furtive in look, brutal in thought—used his feeble cunning to escape the big animals and to kill them.

He lived on the flesh of the animals, and on that of his fellow man when he could catch one.

His home was a hollow under some big fallen tree trunk, with leaves for a bed, or a cave in the rocks, or a hole in the face of some cliff, or a wretched nest built on tall poles above the water

Readers, that was not so long ago, and think what the earth was! Mothers fighting desperately to protect their helpless children, skins of animals for rough clothing —in all the world not an idea, not a thought but selfishness, brutality, bloodshed.

THINK OF THE MARVELS THAT HUMAN GENIUS HAS ACCOMPLISHED! THINK OF THE WONDERFUL THINGS THAT THE BRAIN OF MAN ALONE, UNAIDED, HAS DONE FOR HIMSELF!

He stood shivering and trembling when the lightning flashed. To-day HE HARNESSES THAT LIGHTNING, and it is his slave.

The first men shuddered when the great mammoth thundered by them. Later they saddled and rode that mammoth's cousin, the elephant, and that seemed wonderful. But to-day every child rides on the lightning, for the lightning's power moves those cars that no longer arouse even our curiosity

Man lived in a hole on the face of a cliff. And now he builds in our great cities his own wonderful and beautiful towering buildings, modern cliffs of steel, with thousands of windows and thousands of rooms, heated by the coal of six million years ago, lighted by THE ELECTRICITY OF TO-DAY.

Do you realize that the speech of early men was a whistling, gibbering, guttural horror, limited to a vocabulary of perhaps fifty words, and made up chiefly of explanations, like the barking of dogs indicating hate, fear or some primitive emotion?

Do you realize that the poetry, the Shakespeares, the Miltons, and the Dantes of to-day have grown out of that mumbling by savages?

Can you see a half-naked mother with matted hair protecting a child from cold, soothing it with drowsy sounds repeated over and over, and do you realize that from that first attempt at music has come all the musical genius of to-day, Beethoven and all the others that express sublime thought in music?

The bow in the hand of this naked savage was the highest expression of human genius only a few years ago. Think what we have accomplished since then!

Steam plows rip open fertile fields that were deserts and jungles in this man's day. Millions of needles held by no human hand knit

The Birth of Jealousy — by Ella Wheeler Wilcox

"Ancient mythology relates the life of Adam on a distant planet, and his marriage to Lilith before his advent on earth."

WITH brooding mien and sultry eyes,
Outside the gates of Paradise,
Eve sat and fed the fagot flame
That lit the path whence Adam came.

(Strange are the workings of a woman's mind.)

His giant shade preceded him
Along the pathway, wild and dim;
She heard his swift approaching tread.
But still she sat with drooping head.
(Dark are the jungles of unhappy thought.)

He kissed her mouth and gazed deep in Her troubled eyes; for since their sin
His love had grown a thousand fold—
But Eve drew back; her face was cold.
(Oh, who can read the cipher of a soul!)

"Now, art thou mourning still, sweet wife," Spake Adam tenderly, "the life
Of our lost Eden? Why, in thee
All Paradise remains for me."
(Deep, deep the currents in a strong man's heart.)

Thus Eve: "Nay, not lost Eden's bliss
I moura; for heavier woe than this
Bears on me, with the thought accursed—
In Adam's life I am not first."
(Oh, woman's mind, what hells are fashioned there!)

"The serpent whispered Lilith's name;
('Twas thus he drove me to my shame).
'Pluck yonder fruit,' he said, 'and know
How Adam loved her long ago.'"
(Fools—fools—who wander searching after pain.)

"I ate, and like an ancient scroll
I saw that other life unroll;
I saw thee, Adam, far from here,
With Lilith in a wondrous sphere."
(Bold is the daring of a jealous heart.)

"Nay, tell me not I dreamed it all;
Last night in sleep thou didst let fall
Her name in tenderness. I bowed
My stricken head, and cried aloud."
(Vast, vast the torments of a self-made woe.)

"And it was then, and not before,
That Eden shut and barred its door.
Alone in God's great world I seemed,
Whilst thou of thy lost Lilith dreamed."
(Oh, who can measure such wide loneliness?)

"Now every little breeze that sings
Sighs 'Lilith,' like thy whisperings.
Where can my sorrow hide its face
When Lilith, Lilith fills all space?"
(And Adam in the darkness spake no word.)

and weave and clothe the race.

Huge steamships cross the oceans, making a mere ferry of that limitless waste that was hopeless and appalling to the eye of primitive man.

Steam rushes the men of to-day across continents, under mountains and under rivers, and steam itself is giving way everywhere to electricity.

When this man represented humanity on earth there was no knowledge, only killing. To-day in those magnificent temples, the public schools, knowledge is a free gift to every child.

If mankind has accomplished such wonders as this, shall it not accomplish greater things?

We have conquered the lightning and the wild beasts, conquered the desert, the ocean. We are conquering the air to-day, as we have long since conquered the water.

Can you not see that man, still in his infancy, is struggling magnificently and triumphantly against material conditions?

Doesn't the child in its infancy struggle with matter first? Must it not creep and crawl and walk and speak first? DOESN'T IT THEN PASS FROM THE MATERIAL STRUGGLE TO THE MENTAL STRUGGLE?

Can't you see that humanity, once like this naked man, now the doer of marvels, is finishing its material period of infancy and of struggle against matter?

Soon will come the day of mental work and of mental victories.

Will not the genius of man conquer poverty, that moral wild beast, conquer injustice and selfishness, those poisonous serpents of the intellectual world?

Yes, readers, the future is sure, the destiny of men ON THIS EARTH will be worthy of the earth, worthy of the marvellous genius that has lifted man from the state of this naked savage. We should continue to be hopeful, proud of the past, which has been a steady, upward growth, and determined that the future, intellectually and morally, shall match the material, physical wonders of the past.

We have travelled far from the day when this thinking animal killed the beast without thought. But we have travelled but a step in our REAL JOURNEY.

SLINGS AND ARROWS by James J. Montague.

A Tip to Authors.

SING a song of magazines—one perhaps will do
That Teddy will be editing when a year or two
The crafty writing gents whose fate is fully prepared
To quit that will not come back when they send it there.
If you are a man of industry up and read
Teddy's Life, then write like this, and you must succeed.

How T. Roosevelt Soaked the Trusts—A Romance of Truth.
How Young Teddy Blossomed Out from His Long Youth.
How the Standard Oil Fell Down, When It Calmly Went Up Against a Rugged and Determined President.
How the Colorado Bears Had a Horrid Scare
Every Time That Roosevelt Went Hunting Them Out There.
How Both Short and Ugly Words Often Are Applied
To Persons Whom a President Never Could Abide.

Perhaps a Nation's Votes, and a Nation's Cheers
Will Turn Back to the Same Young Man When Taft's Been in Four Years.
How Since History Began One Man Alone Had Risen
With Strength and Intellect Enough to Call the People His'n.

If you'll fashion articles something as above,
You'll not need to write about foolish topics such as love
And life and problem plays and art, or cultivate a style,
Or try to think of subjects that may seem to you worth while
But make the gifted editor the burden of your song,
And rest assured that pretty soon your check will come along.

If Archbold Had Lived Earlier.

26 Broadway, New York, etc.—My dear Wellington—I wish to urge upon you the desirability of abandoning your plan of attacking General Bonaparte. The General knows a great deal about coal and oil and is in a position to be quite useful to some of the patriotic citizens of the world, being now, as I understand, an Emperor.

Any favors you can show him, such as withdrawing the allied armies, will, I assure you, be deeply appreciated.

JNO. D. ARCHBOLD.

26 Broadway, New York, etc.—My dear Warwick—I should like to call your attention to a young man named Edward, who has been favorably mentioned for the office of King. If you can use your influence to advance him to that position I feel that you will be contributing largely to the welfare of your country, and I think the little matter we were speaking of when last you visited my office can be adjusted to our mutual satisfaction.

JNO. D. ARCHBOLD.

26 Broadway, etc., My dear Earl—Allow me to think you for your disinterested efforts in our behalf. According to our agreement, please find enclosed certificate of deposit for ten thousand pounds sterling. If you have in contemplation the making of any more kings, I would esteem it an especial favor if you communicated with me.

JNO. D. ARCHBOLD.

The Affinity.

Brown met a fair divinity,
And thereupon he swore
That she was the affinity
He'd long been looking for.
He left his wife and home for her,
He handed her his roll,
Because he found her, as it were,
The partner of his soul.

But when the roll grew thin and scant,
And Brown of cash was bare,
The lady grew quite petulant,
And hit him with a chair.

Which shows that an affinity
It is not wise to woo,
For haply one may chance to be
A sparring partner, too.

Before and After.

Lee Smith had bought a motor car, full loud he used to swear
Whenever one came scorching by along the thoroughfare.
"The fiends!" he cried, "What right have they to scorch around the town, Pursuing law-abiding folk, intent to run them down"
It isn't safe to cross a street, it's risky to come back,
Lest one must leave a leg or two behind him on the track.
They know no law, they have no soul, the devil drives their cars,
And every single one of them should be behind the bars."

When Smith had bought a motor car and ran it for a day
He said, "These fool pedestrians keep getting in the way.
If you turn out for one of them, another leaps between Your wheels or promptly flings himself right under your machine.
They think that they have all the rights there are upon the street,
And when they've stalled you on a hill their joy is quite complete.
I really don't see any good of all our public schools
When half the people that you meet are such consummate fools."

THE BOOK OF BORES—THE BIG I—By DOROTHY DIX

"This consists in the Big I tracking you to your own home and stealthily effecting an entrance, pouncing upon you suddenly as you sit alone and defenceless in your library after dinner."

NEXT to tuberculosis the greatest cause of mortality in the world is the kind of bore known as the Egotist, or, in common parlance, the Big I. Thousands of innocent and useful people are annually sent to their graves by this terrible pest of society that invades every walk of life, and against whose attack it is impossible for even the most careful to protect themselves.

No matter where you go, you encounter the Egotist, and even if you should take the wings of the morning and fly to the uttermost parts of the earth, when you got there you would find a big I coiled up on the shore waiting to fasten on you and tell you how "I" did it.

Just when and how this variety of trouble-breeders and soul-wearers first originated is lost in the mists of obscurity, but the fact that from the earliest time there were people who fled from the society of their kind and isolated themselves in caves and other inaccessible places seems to indicate that the Big I was abroad getting in its deadly work at an exceedingly early day.

Whatever its origin, however, it is certain that the species increased with the most amazing rapidity until it has become as common as the yellow fever and malaria-bearing mosquito and the typhoid-carrying house fly. Indeed, it is even more pestiferous and to be dreaded than those other deadly insects, because it is impossible to protect one's self against it by means of screens, nor can you drive it away by a few vigorous slaps, as you frequently can flies and mosquitoes.

The Big I is of two varieties, one of which is called the Swell Headed, and the other the Pessimist, but there is no difference in their ability to inflict punishment and suffering upon a person, and thus both varieties are equally to be dreaded.

The Swell Headed kind is also frequently called the Brag. It may be known by its puffed out chest, which makes it resemble a pouter pigeon, and by its lordly air of self assertion and its gold raiment. It always struts ostentatiously to the front in any company and begins in a loud tone of voice to sing its own praises.

"Look at me," it cries. "I did it. I wrote it. I sung it. I said it. I am a Napoleon of finance. I am the Queen of Sheba and the Venus de Medici. I have the most beautiful house, the most wonderful children, the fastest automobile in the world. I made the moon. I run the sun. Listen while I tell you what a wonder I am."

This weird and afflicting cry the Swell Head Big I repeats over and over and over again until its victims fall dead on the spot.

The Pessimistic Big I resembles the Swell Head only in its relentless ferocity and deadly tactics. It is a shabby, mangy, moth-eaten-looking creature of a dark bilious hue, and with watery eyes. The males of the species may readily be detected at their approach by a strong spirituous odor, much resembling the smell of whiskey or stale beer, while the females are pervaded by a fragrance as of passe peppermint.

It seldom fights in the open, as does the Swell Head Big I, but with a diabolical cunning the Pessimistic Big I waits until it can track its prey to some secluded spot, where escape is impossible, and no call for help avails, and then it begins its fiendish torture.

"Listen to the story of my life," it cries in a cracked-to-voice. "You have got to listen to it, because you can't get away. I am going to tell you my troubles, one by one, in every harrowing detail, and when I get through the list I am going to start right back over it and tell it all over again, and then I am going to repeat it backward and forward, and right and left, and then I am going to encore the performance and keep at it until you pray for death.

"What do I care for your sufferings? What do I care for your writhings and twistings and attempts to escape? Yell, and shriek, and beat your head against the wall if you like. It won't stop me. I'm a leech, I'm a blood sucker. I'm a vampire, and I live on taking away people's vitality and happiness and cheerfulness. Besides, I've bored dozens of people to death with my troubles before now and you needn't think I'm going to have any pity on you."

As the Pessimistic Big I utters these ominous words, it strikes its fangs deeper and deeper into the poor unfortunate upon whom it has fastened until human nature can stand it no more, and the victim succumbs.

The Big I employs two modes of attack, one of which should be sedulously guarded against. The first, and most common, is to seize its prey by the skirt of his coat and back him up against a wall. This cuts off all retreat, and as there are few people brave enough to go to the rescue when they see that a friend has fallen into the clutches of one of these bores, the victim must depend upon himself if he hopes to escape alive. It is a moment when nothing but quick thought and desperate action will save him, and his only chance depends upon his wrenching himself free, even if he leaves his coat behind him in the grasp of the monster.

The second mode of attack of the Big I is even more dangerous because all escape is practically eliminated in it. This consists in the Big I tracking you to your own home and stealthily effecting an entrance, pouncing upon you suddenly as you sit alone and defenceless in your library after dinner. Then you are absolutely at the creature's mercy. You dare not follow your burning desire and natural impulses and brain it with a chair, for unfortunately the law—which is an ass itself—does not permit one to kill bores on sight as it should. The long night is before you, and as the dreadful animal licks its chops and sits down in your best Morris chair and devours you inch by inch at its pleasure.

The sufferings of the victim under such circumstances are indescribably horrible. In vain does he try to gain a minute's respite from the terrible grinding bore by fetching in new and amusing topics; in vain does he try to divert its attention by exhibiting collections of pictures, curios and bric-a-brac; in vain even does he seek to render it so drunk by highballs and so stupefied by tobacco that it will be rendered powerless to do more of everything, the Big I goes relentlessly on, talking about itself, and its belongings, and its achievements, and its hopes and fears, and despairs, until its prey falls in a swoon at its feet.

"It is a moment when nothing but quick thought and desperate action will save him, and his only chance depends upon him wrenching himself free."

The Big I is are both male and female. The Swell Head variety is usually of the masculine persuasion, while the Pessimistic inclines to the weaker, but more tenacious sex. There is no choice in the afflicting quality between them.

FURTHER FACTS.

There is great rivalry between Germany and America as to which has produced the largest and most robust specimen of the Big I. The German variety is known as "Ich Und Gott," while the American is called "Theodore." Both specimens are corkers.

An egotist is a person who talks of himself while you want to talk about yourself.

Only the egotist is happy, for if you think well of yourself it matters not what others think of you.

There is just one person in the world who never wearies of hearing about us, and that is ourselves.

Whom the gods would destroy they first make egotistical.

Is Woman the Inferior of Man?

By T. Claye Shaw, M. D.

ARE there really any scientific—or, perhaps, I should say psychological—grounds for the assertion that woman is naturally the inferior of man?

This cannot be answered by a mere "Yes" or a mere "No." Physically, the answer must be "Yes"; if mentally regarded, not at all. In the early days of human history, when brute force was the sign of superiority, woman, being inferior, exerted her feminine arts of flattery and blandishment to win his admiration and gain his protection.

Returning to the charge, are there not instances in history of women who became rulers of whole tribes, and by so becoming held their own men-folk under subjection? Take Boadicea as an example.

That occasionally did happen, but the fact was probably, in the first instance, due either to there being no male survivors remaining in the tribe, or else to the opposing male faction being extirpated by adherents who were probably bribed to support the new regime. Always, in fact, when there were dissensions among the men, woman found her opportunity, and the supremacy of tyrant man was curtailed or abolished.

Illustrations from the animal kingdom are good in only a partial manner. While the male animal would fight for the female, she fought equally fiercely for her young. To-day, not her physical strength, but her skill in artifice, is woman's most powerful weapon. To every man some member of "the sex" becomes a prize worth winning. And yet, because there are many prizes, she resorts to fictitious aids to capture him —ornaments, face powders and beauty preparations of all sorts are her decoys.

That brings us one naturally to a contemplation of dress as a factor in feminine psychology.

As a matter of fact, at first and even now in many places there was none. But owing to two conditions, climate and bodily imperfection, some kind of dress or covering became a necessity, and ultimately was elaborated as affording an opportunity for the display of wealth or luxury on the part of womankind. On the other hand, where it was desired to subordinate the sexual to the selfish or intellectual, dress was employed to conceal the figure, even the face being hidden by a veil, as in the case of the religeuse.

The capability of woman to do what is called men's work is a matter of some what serious import to our sex in these days of wholesale female clerical employment. This is an important question to argue and one that is difficult to solve. Theoretically, there seems no reason why women should not do—and do well—a great deal of what is called "man's work"; that is, when they are not handicapped sexually. The one great obstacle to her universal success here is that her nature is emotional and obstinate rather than logical and coherent.

The suffragette question in which the fair sex has certainly exhibited a wonderful obstinacy indeed—is partly due to a sense that, theoretically, there is no good reason why they should not vote if they want to, and partly because they believe that they are really fighting for freedom against male restraint, and partly again because the more the men seem determined not to let them have it the more obstinately must they try to get it.

As to women being jealous of our sex. Women are not jealous of our sex, but jealous of each other in that relation. But if they are obstinate and wilful, they are, on the other hand, far our superiors in what for want of a definite term, may be called "sympathy."

One fears a great deal about a man's love of amusement. This should not be regarded as one of her prominent psychological traits. Such a thing is very largely the result of want of occupation, and for that matter the stigma attaches just as much to men. It is said that "society women" do not care to have large families because they want to enjoy themselves. The fact is probably altogether the other way about. It is the want of a family that drives such a woman to seek amusement in order to avoid utter boredom and ennui. But even then their extravagances are sometimes an advantage to others. For instance, if women had not liked diamonds, the Rand mines would have remained unproductive, while if the taste fails now many thousands will be ruined.

I am not now breaking a lance on behalf of that unpleasant specimen of her sex, the vain and pleasure-loving flirt. Nor do I think that she is to be wholly condemned. It must be remembered that sex selection is always more or less competitive, and even flirtation may be primarily designed to test the real feelings of the opposite sex. Moreover, marriage is a much more serious affair for the woman than it is for the man, always. I believe in most cases the woman, if she flirts, does so in reality merely in order to see whether the conditions of such a contract will really suit her.

It is rarely that woman ever gives up the idea of mating. Woman never lived whom age, merely, prevented from accepting an advantageous offer of marriage.

As to the psychological future of women one may draw his own conclusions. They are outnumbering men by millions, they are taking over the occupations of men (except fighting and killing, though they might and can do both). They cannot all be married, so that one side of their nature can never be developed. They will probably develop certain latent aptitudes. Their environment will be enlarged. First they will participate, then monopolize, until a revolution will ensue, and the men whom they have ousted will turn and rend them.

Woman has a much superior religious instinct than man. Church-going is a regular occupation with middle-aged woman of the upper middle class, and here they find an outlet for their emotions. The same may be said of other fads.

The Bridge of the Generations

By Prof. Ernest P. Evans

HOW does the great throng of human qualities, capacities idiosyncrasies, peculiarities, humors, sanities, insanities, energies, imbecilities, excellencies, defects, facets, proficiencies and lifeless inanities of the clasps that span between the generations and carry forward unbroken the lines of heredity from age to age?

Why do I, because my father and his father before him were of spare habit of body, find it impossible to round out a waistcoat, while one of my cousins, whose father and grandfather were stout, overstretches the tailor's tape? How have hereditaries thrown portions across the streams of life and perpetuated themselves again and again on the further shore?

An answer to these questions, and a multitude like them, has long been sought by scientific thinkers, and one new to most readers has recently been pushed into public attention, especially by the presidential address of Dr. Francis Darwin to the British Association for the Advancement of Science. It is an answer that is almost poetic in its romantic suggestiveness. Dr. Darwin, who is the son of the celebrated Charles Darwin, the founder of "Darwinism," adopts the explanation of Hering, according to which memory and inheritance are identical phenomena.

"Between the me of to-day and the me of yesterday" wrote Hering, the German physiologist, nearly forty years ago, "lie night and sleep, abysses of unconsciousness; nor is there any bridge but memory with which to span them." Then he goes on to show that, in like manner, the abysses between two generations is bridged by that unconscious memory that resides in the germ cells. Dr. Darwin, talking of this theory of theory, proceeds to expand it in this way:

"This is the wonderful fact," says Dr. Darwin, "that as the ovum develops into the perfect organism it passes through a series of changes which are believed to represent the successive forms through which its ancestors passed in the process of evolution. This is precisely paralleled by our own experience of memory, for it often happens that we cannot reproduce the last learned verse of a poem without repeating the earlier part; each verse is suggested by the previous one, and acts as a stimulus for the next."

This repetition of similar life characters is called ontogenetic rhythm. In all bisexual organisms, that is, in all animals sprung from the union of two sexes, the ontogenetic rhythm of the offspring is a continuation of the rhythms of its parents, and one or the other is prepotent, according to circumstances. The similarity between the phenomena of memory and those of heredity runs into curious details. Dr. Darwin points out that in the case of memory the introduction of a link from one mental rhythm into another (such as the insertion of a verse from one poem into another, or of a bar of music from one piece into another) can only occur, without great effort, when the two series are closely similar, and this recalls the difficulty of making a cross between distantly related species of animals. The cells have different rhythms, and refuse to fall into step.

The basis of the resemblance or of the cross between memory and heredity is that they both are habits. We learn a tune by short through repeating it again and again until the track of thought lies along certain combinations of brain cells, and these combinations tend to remain or to re-form instantly when stimulated. To uproot a memory the combination must be broken. A very strong and lively impression prints itself so deeply upon the brain cells that the memory remains without the necessity of repetition. There are many things which we do not need to learn by heart. They strike their stamp indelibly at one blow.

In the same way all the cells of the body are trained by the life habits of the organism to which they belong, but most of those life habits had already been acquired in the pre-existing parent. New habits may be acquired, and these, if sufficiently impressed, will become unconscious memories in the cells, and will be transmitted to the succeeding offspring.

Taking the case of broad specific characters—how are they transmitted for thousands upon thousands of years, and even across the vast spaces of geologic time. The rocks contain the remains of animals which lived hundreds of thousands of years ago, and which, in many cases, can hardly be distinguished from the representatives of the same species living to-day. Only a little while ago an ancestor of the terrible tsetse fly, the scourge of Africa, was found in the rocks of the Miocene Age in Colorado. The explanation, nevertheless, is simple. The life cells of the original ancestor of these animals acquired their ontogenetic rhythm, and this was transmitted from generation to generation. The individual cells perish, but the memory, the training, remains in their successors. New cells are continually introduced into the body, and after a few years the old ones have all disappeared, but the esprit de corps remains unaltered. The new cells have acquired the old memories, and hand them on in turn to their successors. Life looks backward and forward along an unbroken line of tendencies. Our progeny dreams already in our veins, and our ancestry relives in our inherited habits.

OH, WINNIE!

Copyrighted, 1906, by the American Examiner Great Britain Rights Reserved

Verse by Carolyn Wells

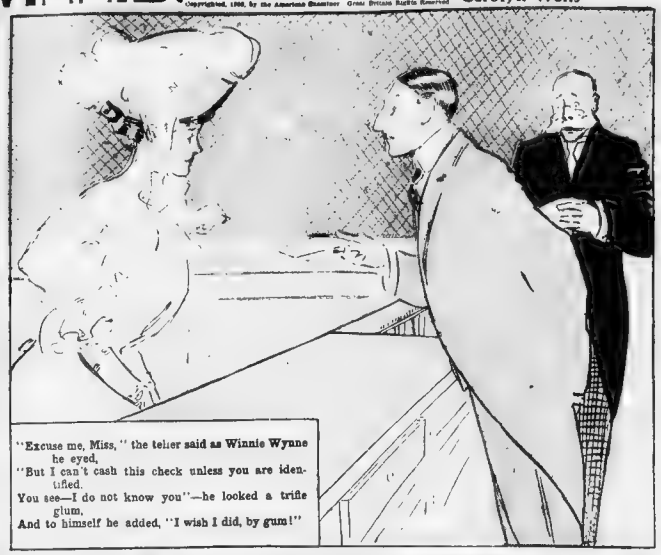
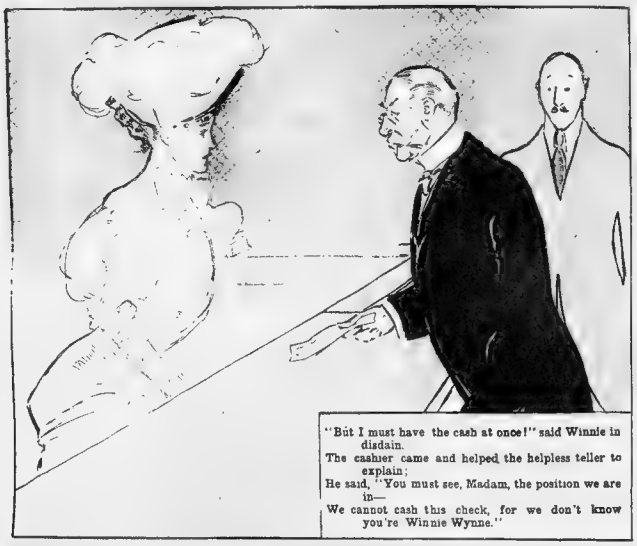
Out shopping, Winnie found herself quite out of funds one day;
The bank where she kept her account was twenty blocks away.
She stepped into the nearest one, and pleasantly said she
To the haughty paying teller, "Will you cash this check for me?"



"Excuse me, Miss," the teller said as Winnie Wynne he eyed,
"But I can't cash this check unless you are identified.
You see—I do not know you"—he looked a trifle glum,
And to himself he added, "I wish I did, by gum!"



"But I must have the cash at once!" said Winnie in disdain.
The cashier came and helped the helpless teller to explain;
He said, "You must see, Madam, the position we are in—
We cannot cash this check, for we don't know you're Winnie Wynne."

A moment Winnie looked perplexed, and then her face grew bright.
"But I can prove it, sir," she said, "then it will be all right!
You see, I can assure you that I know I'm Winnie Wynne, Because"—she smiled triumphantly—"because I've always been!"

Although he scarcely caught her words, the cashier caught that smile!
He grabbed some bank notes eagerly from a convenient pile;
"Oh, yes, indeed! Yes! Yes!" he said, his eyes on Winnie's face;
He gave the notes uncounted—which she took with careless grace.

The cashier stood with raptured gaze as Winnie tripped away;
And did the clerks all rubber, too? Well, I should rather say!
They slapped each other's shoulders—such transports they were in—
Completely flabbergasted by the smile of Winnie Wynne.

Winnie's adventures will be continued in next Sunday's Dramatic Section.

Miss Ethel Gibson

Miss Bessie Stone.

A HOLIDAY in Autumn is always welcomed by society. Thanksgiving gives the finest of opportunities for the week-end house parties and the invigorating outdoor sports.

Country homes, which are steadily growing in favor as holiday haunts of the smart set, are rapidly being transformed into settings for such scenes of luxury and splendor as would amaze the simple forefathers who originated the day of Thanksgiving and prayer.

Invitations were issued several weeks ago and hostesses have been busy with plans for something new and unique in the way of entertainment for their guests.

The hunting field will be a popular rendezvous for many, while the private theatricals, motoring, horseback riding, football and golf will appeal to others. So many and varied are the amusement plans of the hostesses that there will be something for everybody. The day will be celebrated in true New England fashion.

Among the girls of the younger set most in demand for the house parties and who have been obliged to refuse more invitations than any others of their set are Ruth Lawrence, who is to return to Lasell from Hot Springs the first of the week, Eleanor Cotton, Bessie Stone and Ethel Gibson.

Those who are remaining at their country estates until after the holiday and who will entertain house parties on that occasion are the Walter Dennens, whose Summer place at Manchester will be the scene of unusual gaiety; the T. Denny Sargents, the William B. Walkers, the Amory Elliots, the Thomas W. Lawsons, who are at Dreamwold, the Rowland Hazards, the Charles Adamses, who are at Birch Hill Point for their place in Lincoln.

Mr. and Mrs. Talbot Aldrich will celebrate the day at Bridal Farm, their summer place at Peakspong, Hamilton House, the home of the George Tysons in Hewick, Me.; Brierfield, the Tileston place at Mattapoisett; Rose Lodge, the S. Reed Aretts' villa at Newell, Bellevue, the William Stanford Stevens' place at St. Andrews, and Greystone Lodge, the country place of the George Littles at Cohasset, will all be en fete for the day.

The annual football game between the Cadets and Battery A at the Harvard Stadium in the morning will attract a large crowd, and many of the fashionables who are guests out of town for the day will motor in for the game and return in time for dinner.

BUDS PREPARE FOR DEBUTANTE EVENTS

Coming Out" Parties Herald Fair Girls' Initial Bows to Society.

One of the most attractive of the season's buds is Miss Anna Gardiner, daughter of the Robert H. Gardiners of Beacon street, who was introduced at a reception and tea given for her at the Gardiner home Wednesday afternoon. Miss Gardiner is quite the beauty of her set and is destined to be quite as popular as her sister, who before her marriage in the early Spring was the first vice president of the Vincent Club. Miss Gardiner, who attracted much admiring attention when she served as maid of honor at her sister's wedding, has spent the Summer in Europe with Mr. and Mrs. Davis, seeing the country and incidentally picking up some of the smartest of gowns for her debutante season.

Miss Dorothy Mandell is another attractive bud of the season who will shortly make her initial bow to smart society. Miss Mandell, who is the daughter of the William Mandells of the Fenway, will be introduced at a large ball in December. Miss Mandell is tall and slender, with dark hair and blue eyes. She is accomplished and clever.

* * *

Helene Peabody, another bud, is of a decidedly extreme blonde type, with decidedly patrician features and aristocratic bearing. She is a daughter of the J. Lowell Peabodys, who are planning a ball for her early in December.

New York debutante of interest here is Miss Hilda Hudson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rowland Ames Hudson, who will be presented to society at a reception Mrs. Hudson will give at her home on Park avenue, New York, on the afternoon of Dec. 2. Miss Hudson is well known here, having been often visited her relatives, the Ames family. Miss Hudson is a granddaughter of the late Oakes Ames and other prominent families, and consequently be one of the social successes of the season.

Representative of Mrs. John W. Weeks are shortly returning to Washington, they will spend the Winter in the former's absence in Secretary and Mrs. Weeks. They will have with them their daughter, Katherine, one of the season's debutantes, whom they will present in society early next month.

* * *

Mrs. Charles A. Munn, who is so well known in the North Shore Summer colony, has announced that she will present her daughter, Miss Carrie Munn, at a dance to be given at the Munn residence in Washington December 29. Miss Munn is an exceedingly popular with the debutante set and will be a social leader.

* * *

Miss Dorothy Bigelow is soon to sail for Europe, where she will remain several weeks before opening their Commonwealth avenue home for the Winter.

LATE SOJOURNERS DESERT COUNTRY

But Few Bostonians Now Remain at Villa or Shore Mansion.

Mrs. Charles S. Sargent, who has just returned from her Summer home at Wood's Hole to her Brookline estate, Hunt Lea, held her first "at home" Monday afternoon. Mrs. Sargent has chosen Monday as her "at home" day throughout the season. Mrs. William P. Sumner, of Beacon street will also be ready to receive her friends on Mondays.

Mr. and Mrs. Lars Anderson returned Monday in the week from New York, where they had been attending the horse show. They are at their country place, Weld, in Brookline. They made the trip in their automobile, and brought with them Mrs. Leslie Peach of New York, formerly Miss Alfred G. Vanderbilt.

* * *

Miss Ethelrig Rinckpole is reported to be having the finest kind of time in Washington where she is the guest of Mrs. Meyer gave a dinner for her last week, and several other entertainments are being given in her honor.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Bowling Tilton have closed their Manchester-by-the-Sea home until after the holiday when they will open their Winter residence on Bay State road.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Bellamy Storer, who last Winter occupied the Crowninshield house on Marlboro street, are to spend the Winter in Washington. They will reopen their home on Rhode Island avenue, Washington, the first week in December.

The Misses Eliza and Ida Mason of Mount street, who always spend their Summers in Newport, have rented their house for the Winter to Mr. and Mrs. George Hilliard Benjamin of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Ayer, who spend the Winter at their Beverly Farms estate, are at their country place in Brookline, where they will remain several weeks before opening their Commonwealth avenue house for the Winter.

* * *

Dr. and Mrs. John Collins Warren have come up from their Summer home and are at the Victoria for a few days while their Beacon street home is being made ready for them.

LANDS AFAR LURE BOSTONIANS AWAY

Smart Set Leaders to Pass Winter in Paris and Touring Europe.

Lands afar still wave a beckoning pennant to Bostonians.

Mrs. J. Montgomery Sears and her daughter Helen have not sailed for Europe as yet. They are still at their South Boro estate, but will sail from New York on the 25th to pass the Winter in Paris. They have leased their town house to the Bayard Thayers for the season. Going over with the Searses is Miss Katherine Wayden, a sister-in-law of Miss Helen. The Searses are the closest of friends, and Miss Wayden has promised to stay with the Searses throughout the Winter. They will return to America near May.

Mrs. E. C. Swift closed "Swiftmore" for the season early in the week and left in her limousine for New York, where she will be a guest of friends in Dobbs Ferry, Saturday, when she will sail for Europe, where she will spend the Winter.

* * *

Mrs. James McMullan, a dame of Reunion McMullan has closed her Summer home at Manchester and has gone to Virginia Hot Springs. Her granddaughter, Miss Grace Peters, who makes her home with the McMullans has gone on a long trip to the Panama canal for a delightful season in Washington. Miss Peters will be joined in Paris by her aunt, Lady Harrington, who will remain with her for several months. She spent the Winter with Mrs. McMullan in Washington. Lady Harrington was Miss Annie McMillan, whose wedding at Manchester-by-the-Sea created a notable event.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis R. Spaulding will spend their Summer motoring in Europe. They returned to America and have gone to their villa at West Manchester for the Winter.

During the absence of the Spauldings in Europe Mrs. Wilson A. Russell occupies their Summer home, Mrs. Russell has joined for England, en route for South America.

Mrs. Bradford Swan of Richmond, Cumberland county, is the town for Europe in a few days, where she will spend the Winter with her son, Dennis Peters, who is on the staff of the [illegible] Embassy in Paris, and with Mrs. Swan's daughter, Mrs. Ethel Jones, who also is living in Paris. Mrs. Jones will also spend some time with her sister Mrs. Lamar Middleton, who has a charming home in Paris, and who entertains extensively.

NEW PLAYBILLS AT MANY THEATRES

THANKSGIVING Week comes not without meaning in the Boston dramatic field. The theatre-goers are thankful for the constant succession of new and good productions Boston is having. The managers are thankful for continued good patronage. It seems a case of "Everybody happy."

A new theatre opens here to-morrow, the Gaiety. It is built on the Washington street site of the old Lyceum and will be an up-to-date burlesque house. It starts in with "Charley" Waldron's Trocadero Burlesquers as an initial offering.

Frank Daniels comes to the Park Theatre to-morrow in his musical comedy, "Hook of Holland," with Miss Christie McDonald, a Boston favorite, as his leading woman.

Keith's Theatre heads a strong vaudeville bill with Nora Mayhew. At the Orpheum the bill is led by Irene Hazard, the "Live Doll of Comic Opera."

Many Favorites Coming.

There is a notable revival of former successes. At the Castle Square they will put on "Are You a Mason?" the farcical screamer which would make a lodge goat laugh.

And, to go back a bit farther into that good old farce-comedy days, when Joe Welch put the fun in funny, which is from present indications, will make merry. This is the fourteenth week of her Boston run, which is truly "going some."

Austin & Stone's show new curios and a new dancer in the burlesque bed, engaged for the Gaiety. Skip Farm," a delightful pastoral.

Three local stars hold over with their parts. Robert Gaylor has one more week at the Hollis in "The Call of the North." Otis Skinner has one more week in "The Honor of the Family," at the Colonial. At the Majestic Miss Maxine Elliott plays a week longer in "Myself—Bettina," before changing on November 30 to the premiers of her new play, "The Chaperon."

At the Grand Opera House Joe Welch has engaged Lew Dockstader's minstrels for a week, beginning next Monday night. Dockstader, himself, of course, "The Merry Widow" is still making

Who is the Most Beautiful Woman in the World?

THE distinguished French artist Willette has said: "Americans are ridiculous and insupportable, with their independent airs dominating even the male with their physical forces. Thus they lose charm. One never sees a really beautiful American woman, or dreams of her, as one dreams of happiness, except occasionally on the stage, and usually in the chorus. There are no really beautiful women in American fashionable life."

The portrait of Lady Lowther printed on this page today is one of many examples which prove the stupid ignorance of our foreign critics.

Lady Lowther was Miss Alice Atherton Blight, a justly celebrated beauty of New York and Newport fashionable life. Among the fashionable beauties of the world Lady Lowther has a firmly established position.

Too Beautiful to be Seen.

Why the Dazzling Countess di Morosini Must Always Wear a Veil in Public.

The Beautiful Countess Morosini, Who Is Veiled to Avoid Attracting the Crowd Leaving Her Palace in Venice

The Countess Morosini, Heavily Veiled and Her Niece Feeding the Pigeons at St Mark's Place Venice

There is an Italian noblewoman whose beauty is so dazzling and perfect that when people do but catch a glimpse of it in the streets they stand rooted to the spot, tranafixed with wonder and admiration, thereby stopping the traffic of a great city and producing a state of public affairs bordering on anarchy.

The Countess Annina Morosini is, in fact, too beautiful to be seen by ordinary mortals. It is said that susceptible men, when they look upon her are in danger of losing their reason.

Just after marriage the Countess, who belongs to the highest aristocracy of Venice promenaded in the afternoon upon St. Mark's Place the principal public square of the city. Every time that she appeared the crowd became greater.

Upon her third appearance the excitement reached an amazing climax. The beauty of the Countess stopped the business of Venice. People, of course do not drive in that city, because most of the streets are occupied by canals. The fact that she was afoot made it very easy for the crowd to surround the Countess. They stood and gazed at her not impertinently but just with simple, child-like, immeasurable admiration. Those who could not get a good view of her from the ground climbed up on steps, col-

FOR SALE—A ROYAL HAREM

One Specimen from the Sultan's Harem—Photographed—Put Up at Auction.

Odd Predicament of the Deposed Sultan of Morocco, Who Is Compelled to Sell His Fine Harem to the Highest Bidder.

THE dep[osed] [Sultan] [of] Morocco has [been] hard [pressed] to make [ends] meet since he [was] deposed [by] his brother, the present Sultan, and [is] now [in] desperate straits for money. [He] has [been] compelled to sell his harem, which [is] one of the finest [in] the world, to the highest bidder. [The] auction [is] now [in] progress [at] Casablanca, [on] the coast [of] Morocco, [and] the ex-Sultan's harem [is] [on] exhibition [to] the public [and] [to] prospective purchasers. [The] sale [is] [to] be [a] private [one], [but] the ex-Sultan [is] willing [to] sell [to] any [one] who [will] pay [his] price. [The] price [of] this [rare] collection [of] Mohammedan beauty [is] [not] [to] be [a] small [one]. [The] Sultan [is] not disposed [to] accept [for] [less] [than] [a] million [dollars], [as] they [are] [the] finest [in] the [world], [and] he [has] already [a] number [of] [offers] [very] [close] [to] [that] [figure]. [It] [is] [said] [that] [he] does [not] [wish] [to] [sell] [to] [the] [highest] [bidder], [but] [to] [the] [one] [who] [will] [treat] [the] [ladies] [of] [the] [harem] [of] [Fez] [and] [Morocco] with extraordinary consideration.

Abdul Aziz, [the] ex-Sultan's [brother], [is] not [the] [only] [one] [who] [has] [specimens] [of] [rare] [beauty] [in] [his] family. [The] Moorish [princes] [have] [the] [pick] [of] [the] [countries] [over] which they rule, and [the] Sultan [has] [the] [pick] [of] [the] [princes]. [The] [result] [is] [that] [the] [Sultan] [has] [a] [harem] [which] [is] [the] [envy] [of] [all] [the] [world].

In addition [to] [the] [beauties] [of] [Morocco], [the] [Sultan] [has] [specimens] [of] [every] [race] [under] the sun. [There] [are] [fair-haired] Circassians, [delicately] "What am I offered for a first-class harem in good order, containing specimens of the beauties of all countries?" [brunette] Turks, [yellow] Arabs, [and] [dusky] Hebrew of Tangiers. [Indeed], [the] [Sultan] [has] [a] [most] [attractive] [specimen] [of] [every] [race] [under] the sun.

We [have] [heard] [a] [great] [deal] [about] [the] [Sultan's] harem, [but] [it] [is] [a] [most] [unattractive] [place]. [It] [is] [a] [fact] [that] [the] [Sultan] [claims] [the] [right] [to] [dispose] [of] [the] [more] [attractive] [specimens] [of] [his] [harem] [as] [he] [pleases]. [Frequently] [they] [are] [sold] [to] [wealthy] [Moors] [who] [desire] [to] [own] [the] [very] [best]. [Before] [the] [official] [title] [of] [the] [Sultan's] [imperial] [Harem] [is] [given] [to] [the] [purchaser] [he] [must] [undergo] [a] [rigid] [examination] [by] [American] [physicians]. [The] [Sultan] [is] [now] offering [to] [dispose] [of] [his] [Harem] [by] [auction], [and] [it] [is] [now] [on] [exhibition] [at] [Casablanca].

Many curious persons, generally foreigners armed with cameras, still pursue her, but they get little consolation for their pains. Even when she goes out in a gondola she keeps her features concealed with her veil.

Another exciting episode occurred when the Countess visited the International Exposition at Turin. The visitors gazed assiduously at the Countess, instead of studying the interesting piles of canned goods and other fetishes that had been arranged for their entertainment. The attendants had great difficulty in rescuing the Countess from her admirers, and on the following days she went heavily veiled.

The Countess's beauty is now strictly reserved for her social intimates. J. Pierpont Morgan is one of those who have been privileged to see her. He has met her during his frequent visits to Italy in pursuit of art treasures, and he insists at present the opinion that she was the most beautiful woman in the world. The same fate has befallen women many times before, but this case was remarkable on account of its sequel. Nearly [illegible] says the other male chimpanzee [illegible] is found dead the next morning [illegible] nearly dead to the village. In the [illegible] the young woman was wearing [illegible] a bride by the great creature, fed and treated with all the consideration of which [illegible] was capable.

At the end of six months the brute was killed in battle with another of his kind and the wretched bride was free to return to her tribe.

Some time later a baby was born, half human and half ape. The latter never married, but busied herself in bringing up this strange child of the forest. The village hated the Zizi Rambos, as he was called, until his mother feared for the little monster's life.

Just at this time a sea captain offered the mother inducement to part with her son on condition that he should be well taken care of. The captain took the child safely to Paris. Professor Metchnikoff, hearing that a hideous, hideous ape, with large hands and feet and head, that was half human, was at the French capital, paid him a call.

The scientist was so impressed with the remarkable intelligence of the freak that he determined to study him and if possible teach him to talk.

"This tragedy of the jungle," says Professor Metchnikoff, "has given us an animal which probably closely resembles the ancestral type from which the gorilla's ancestors and ours diverged.

"The ancestral type represents the period in our history when human language was about to be developed. One of the man whose work is used as a basis is Professor Lavalette, of Nantes, in France."

NO MORE WRINKLES

SCRANTON WOMAN MAKES REMARKABLE DISCOVERY THAT PROMISES TO BE A GREAT AID TO BEAUTY

Della Fillson of Scranton, Pa., seems to be the woman whose name will go down in history as the discoverer of something that will make many people look young. For years she has been experimenting with various remedies and with her own face as a subject, and now she has at last succeeded in producing a cream which she says will have the effect of making the wrinkles disappear as if by magic. She is so confident that this cream will do what she claims for it that she is willing to send a sample to any one who will write her for it. Mrs. Fillson has written to the Examiner telling of her discovery and asking that we make the following announcement:

Mrs. Della Fillson, Scranton, Pa., Offers to Give Particulars to All Who Write Absolutely Free

Whatever may be in store for us in the way of still more tightly swathed dress parties, I defy you to find anything to match more mummylike than the silhouette of the fashionable woman to-day. Tightly her meagre draperies wind about her form, tightly they cling to her knees, and caress her figure in a close embrace up to contracted chest and shoulders. If she be wearing one of the new mummy veils swathing head and shoulders, then the illusion is complete. Indeed Madame Mummy just stepped from her case!

A Neat, Modish Shirt Waist Model

THE less elaborate in style the shirt waist the more it appeals to the woman who fashions her own as it means less labor and less difficulty in laundering. This waist is simple and graceful. A broad plait over the shoulders adds to the width.

The sleeves show a new style. A trimming of buttons, as illustrated, will look well on silk or cloth, or braid, bobbing or embroidery may be substituted.

The pattern is cut in six sizes—32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. It requires 3½ yards of 21 inch material for the 36-inch size.

Ladies' Dressing Sack

GRACE, simplicity and comfort are combined in this dressing sack. Red flored elderdown was used to make this model, which is also suited to flannel, silk or wash fabrics. The back is semi fitting. The fronts are loose and laid in broad plaits that are stitched to yoke depth.

At the waist line the fulness is held in position by a belt. The sleeves are of the bishop style, and finished with a band cuff.

The pattern is cut in six sizes—32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. It requires 4¼ yards of 27 inch material for the 36 inch size.

To obtain either of these two desirable patterns, carefully fill in the accompanying coupon and mail with 10 cents for each in silver or stamps to

I WISH, I WISH, I WISH — NOW LETS SEE'- ER RESOLVED
THAT EVERY DAY IS THANKSGIVING TO A GOOD MAN. HE IS THANKFUL FOR HIS EYE SIGHT, HE IS THANKFUL THAT HE LIVES IN AN AGE WHEN HE CAN THINK AND SAY WHAT HE PLEASES, WHEN BLACK BIGOTRY AND SUPERSTITION ARE GONE. THERE ARE NO MORE WOOD NYMPHS & MERMAIDS AND GOBLINS & BUGABOOS. THE WORLD IS GETTING BETTER AND WIDER EVERY DAY. WE ARE THANKFUL THAT THE WORLD IS SO FULL OF SWEET PEOPLE AND THAT IF WE WANT HAPPINESS & HEALTH WELL - IT IS UP TO US, THEY ARE FREE LIKE THE AIR. IT IS A GREAT PRIVILEGE TO LIVE, SO LETS BE THANKFUL FOR LIVING
